This July 4th choose your independents, with two new, explosive series from DARK ANGEL PRODUCTIONS!

TOKYO. 1935. A GOOD TIME FOR A DARK HUNTER.

One of the world's best soldiers of fortune is up against one of the world's mightiest armies. Arron Day, Blackjack, goes to Japan to protect a noted dignitary from a secret order of military overlords and their deadly assassins. With the fires of World War II beginning to ignite, Japan is boiling—and Arron is about to get burned.

Created and written by Alex Simmons
Cover by Tim & Greg Hildebrandt

Part one of four. In full-color—coming soon!

Action, adventure, danger. . . for all ages.

BOMBS, GOONS, DEATH TRAPS— ALL BEFORE BEDTIME?

STEPHEN LANE is an average twelve-year old boy spending the weekend with his quiet, book reading, boring Uncle Richard. Suddenly, mad professors, weird thugs, and world conquerors are coming out of the woodwork. Surprisingly, Uncle Richard is right at home battling the fiends, but Stephen is trying hard not to lose his lunch, or his life. For him, the hardest part isn't the non-stop globe-trotting, or avoiding death-dealing devices, it's getting back home . . . before his parents find out!

Book one by Alex Simmons
Book two by Chris Ryan
Book three by Bill McCay
With art by Jamal Igle & Ravil Lopez

A full-color miniseries—coming soon!

CBG Reader Poll: Features Liked Best and Disliked Most

As in each year's Fan Awards, CBG readers were asked to vote on which three features they liked the best and which they disliked the most. The ballot was included with the official CBG Fan Awards ballot.

As ever, CBG uses this poll as a guide — but high or low placement does not automatically affect a feature's use in CBG, and no contributor should consider a feature canceled until and unless he or she hears it from the editor.

Since it began running in CBG in 1990, But I Digress has consistently been the most liked feature each year — with the exception of 1992, when we apparently got so busy that we didn't run the ballot. Point of View has maintained its second-place showing for the second year in a row, with approximately the same vote spread as last year between first and second. The gap between POV and Oh, So? has widened considerably from last year to this year, while Tony's Tips maintained its fourth place position. Ask Mr. Silver Age moved up two positions to round out the top five.

For complete results please turn to Page 32 for the "Likes Best" list and Page 36 for the "Dislikes Most" list.

Editorial

By Maggie Thompson

• The first year Comics Buyer's Guide polled its audience to determine the field's favorite creators, titles, and characters, the results (announced in our 500th issue) included many names still familiar to today's comics buffs: Al Milgrom, Len Wein, Frank Miller, Miller's "Last Hand" in Daredevil #181, The Uncanny X-Men, and Wolverine. The Comics Buyer's Guide Fan Awards were initially decided by vote of its subscribers — and were tallied by hand by CBG's editors.

That was in 1983.

As the years went by, ballots were distributed more and more widely and eventually tabulated electronically — until the very scope of its circulation took it disproportionately beyond CBG's core audience.

Next year, the votes will once again reflect the interests of that audience: those who care enough about comics to buy a publication to guide them in their purchases. In 1998, only CBG recipients will receive a ballot, restoring the awards to their initial, solid foundation.

• And cheers for all those who were listed as favorites for their work published in 1996-dated comics. Keep in mind that every single name listed this issue had at least 10 comics buffs for whom there was no other person (or publication or story) they preferred. These are the tops.

• Cheers, too, to the contributors who provided our readers' top five favorites: Peter David, Mark Evanier, Tony Isabella, and Craig Shutt.

Oh, yes, and to you, the readers who share with us all, via your letters, your opinions about and information on the comic-book field in Oh, So? — the weekly letters column (and third most popular feature in CBG). (By the way, let me repeat a tip for some letter writers about getting letters considered for inclusion: You need to provide your name and full address. I received a fax this week which, again, gave only a name and community as the return address; that is, in effect, an anonymous letter. We not only don't run anonymous letters; we don't read them, either. If you want your address — or even your name — withheld, that's peachy. But we need to know who you are. Just thought I'd mention it, since we're still occasonally getting this sort of letter.)

• Thanks, too, to Peter David for agreeing to be the master of ceremonies for the CBG Fan Awards event at Heroes Con in Charlotte. It's a relatively thankless job (though he'll get a free meal — and my profuse thanks — out of it). It's the sort of high-pressure duty that adds to the pressures of an already tension-packed weekend, and we appreciate the heck out of his willingness to tackle the project. I'm writing this before the event; this issue will go to the printer after the event — but before I get back to Iola. So I'm anticipating what is shaping up to be a celebrity-packed event, with many kind folks agreeing to participate in the proceedings. More on this next week.

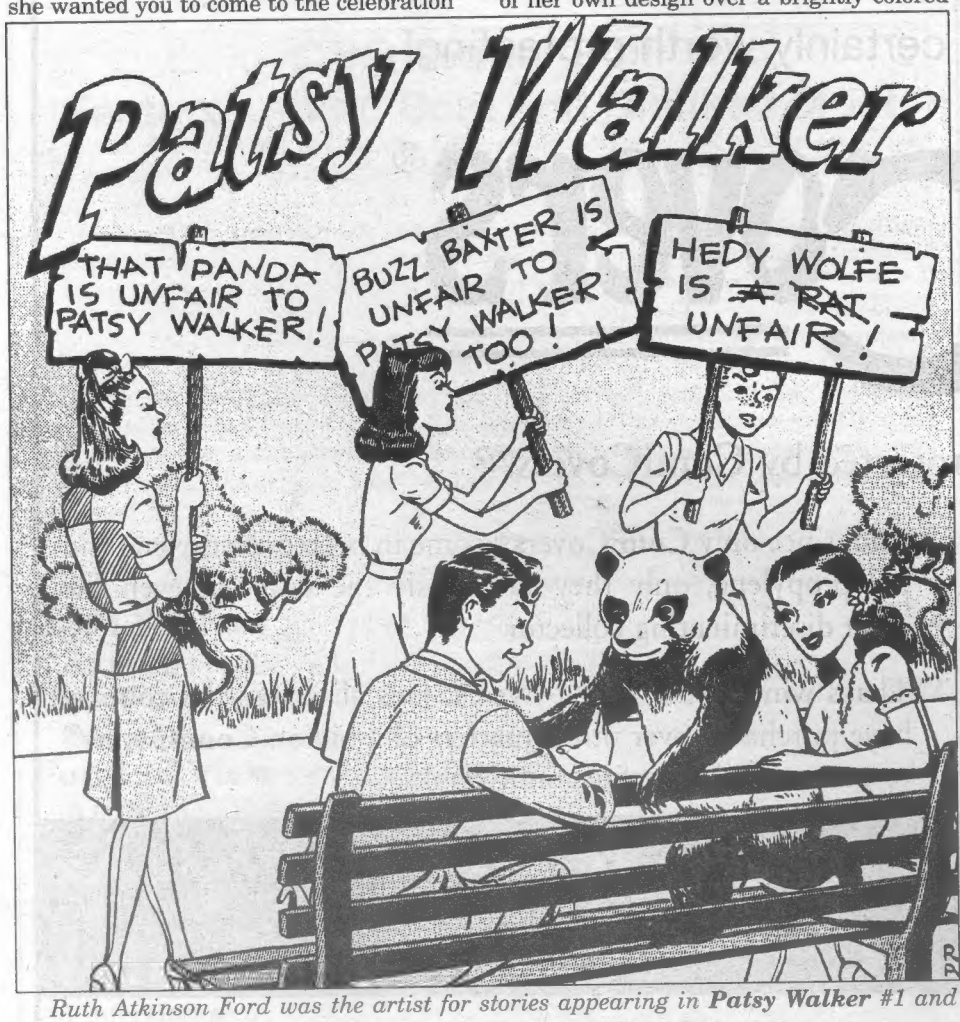
Artist Ruth Atkinson Ford dies June 1

Drew 'Millie the Model' and 'Patsy Walker' in the '40s

By Trina Robbins

Cartoonist Ruth Atkinson Ford died of cancer June 1 but, before she died, she attended her own wake and helped write her obituary. On May 23, I received a call from her daughter, Lena, regretting that she had to inform me of her mother's death. "But," she continued, "Don't feel bad, because she is still here with us and she wanted you to come to the celebration of her life this Sunday." I thought Lena, a Buddhist, was simply being spiritual until she put her mother on the phone to give me directions to her house!

Ruth wanted to share herself one more time with her extended family and friends, and that is what she did, receiving hugs from where she sat in her wheelchair and wearing exquisite silver jewelry of her own design over a brightly colored dress. Despite the fact that nobody got through that Sunday with dry eyes, it was a wonderful experience to have the chance to say goodbye to a unique lady — one of real importance in comics history.



Ruth Atkinson Ford was the artist for stories appearing in Patsy Walker #1 and Millie the Model #1.

I first met Ruth in the early '90s, when I received a call from comics dealer Gary Arlington, asking if I'd ever heard of Ruth Atkinson. I repeated what little I knew about her, that she seemed to have drawn for Fiction House in the '40s and, later, for Love Comics. The 1985 book Women and the Comics, which I co-wrote with Catherine Yronwode, stated, "Considerable mystery surrounds ... Ruth Atkinson."

"Well," said Gary, "She just left my store."

Ruth had walked into Gary's Mission District comics store, taken a look around, and commented, "I used to draw this stuff." Bless Gary, he made sure to get her phone number, and, when I called her — she turned out to live eight blocks away from me — she said she'd been waiting for my call!

I visited Ruth in her flat, decorated with ceramic animals she'd made and featuring a Buddhist altar, and discovered just how important a part she was of comics history. Ruth had drawn the very first issue of Millie the Model in 1945 and had drawn most of the first two years' worth of Patsy Walker, facts that even Stan Lee had forgotten.

Ruth had gone to work for Fiction House comics in 1943, at a time when Fiction House had more women drawing for them than any of the other comics publishers. She became art director for the company, and roomed with Lily Renee, their star woman artist.

Dissatisfied with art directing because it left her little time for actual drawing, Ruth left Fiction House for freelance work, and some of her earliest freelance assignments were on what would become two of Marvel's (then Timely's) most famous and longest-lasting girl comics characters. Because she delineated Millie the Model and Patsy Walker so early on in their comics life, Ruth helped form their looks and personality, and she made them charming, perky, and downright cute.

MILLIE the MODEL
MY PICTURED BEAUTY IS SO BREATH-TAKING IT SCARES ME SOMETIMES!
UH, HUH!
THE FAMOUS LARRY MOVER HAS JUST MADE MILLIE COLLINS A MODEL, AND — — MY FONDEST GIRL-HOOD DREAM IS REALIZED AT LAST — I'M A MODEL!
DON'T FORGET WHO FIXED IT FOR YOU, AND IN CIDENTALLY YOU'RE DOING A PIC TURE TO-MOR-ROW!
YOU BE HERE TO-MORROW AT 9:00 SHARP — POSITIVELY NOT LATER THAN 9:45!
TO-MORROW? THERE'S TIME TO GET TO RUN AND GET RENOVATED!

By the late '40s and through the early '50s, Ruth was drawing for the Lev Gleason romance comics. Gone, alas, were the bouncy stories she'd illustrated for Timely. Most love comics are, rightly, not known for cleverness or humor, and the Gleason titles were no exception. In 1949, she was the artist on a series called "How Did He Propose?" which ran in Lover's Lane comics. One story stands out among the hackneyed scripts: something called "My Dearest Passenger." While 90% of the women in Lover's Lane comics were secretaries, nurses, or salesgirls, the heroine of "My Dearest Passenger" had the

EXCLUSIVE TO THE WORD

I Hate It Here

by Spider Jerusalem
author of "Waving and Drowning"

I sent my assistant down to the corner for a monkeyburger. I really fancied some Korean dog, but the local Korean got bought out by the Shark Bar people, who are trying to head off the expansion of those tiny Club Snack hot seal-eye kiosks. Mind, Club Snack are having their problems; they've being sued for breach of fiduciary contract by the Long Pig chain, where Club Snack once had concession stands.

Long Pig could use the compensation money, since hard questions are being asked about the location of their stock—the Australian census numbers are down for the third year in a row.

I learned a long time ago never to annoy an Incan. And I always preferred caribou eyes, anyway. There used to be loads of Eskimo fast food stands around here. I wonder what happened to them?

FORD

surprisingly non-traditional job of bus driver. When she was forced to pass up a cute guy because her bus was running late, she started a love-hate relationship between passenger and driver that ended in marriage. The script was brighter and faster-moving than average, and Ruth interpreted this story, as well as the more cliched plots she had to deal with, in a style which had gained much in competence and sophistication since her early Fiction House days.

A TRUE LOVE Story
HOW did he PROPOSE?
A PROPOSAL ALWAYS HAS ABOUT IT THE AURA OF EXCITEMENT AND THE GLOW OF PLEASURE. IT IS A DELICIOUS MEMORY TO BE SHELTERED AND TREASURED IN THE HEART AND RETOLD IN COUNTLESS HEARTBEATS. IT IS A THRILLING ACCOUNT OF BREATHLESS ENCHANTMENT TO BE REVEALED TO THE WORLD.
HAVE YOU EVER SEEN THE MOON SO BIG AND SILVERY, DAVID... SO MYSTERIOUS?
AND IT'S GETTING VERY LOW IN THE SKY, WHICH MEANS IT MUST BE GETTING LATE! I'D BETTER TAKE YOU HOME, LYNN, DARLING! YOUR FAMILY WILL BE WORRYING!
Illustrated by RUTH ATKINSON
THE INSTANT I MET DAVID DILLON I KNEW HE WAS THE ONE MAN IN THE WORLD FOR ME. AND I KNEW HE LOVED ME, TOO, FOR SOON AFTER WE MET HE STOPPED GOING OUT WITH OTHER GIRLS. EVERYTHING SEEMED PERFECT, EXCEPT FOR ONE THING—NOT ONCE IN ALL THE MONTHS WE DATED HAD HE EVER SPOKEN OF MARRIAGE. ON EACH DATE I WOULD HOPE FOR THOSE ALL-IMPORTANT WORDS, BUT IN VAIN.

Ford also worked on Lev Gleason's romance comics, pencilling such features as "How Did He Propose?"

By 1952, Ruth, now married, followed the custom of those days and abandoned her career to raise a daughter, but she was no June Cleaver. In her own words, she "stayed home, babied, was miserable, and made everybody else around me miserable." So, once her daughter was in kindergarten, she got together her portfolio and hit the comics publishers again. Unfortunately, this was during the great comics slump of the late '50s, and Ruth discovered that the bottom had dropped out of the market. Offers were few, far between, and for less pay than she had earned in the '40s. She went back to her pre-Fiction House job as a corsetier, selling girdles at Lord and Taylor.

Though Ruth had left comics for good, she never forsook the arts and worked as a labor organizer, occupational therapist, and freelance designer ("I lost a lot of money in that," Ruth told me.) and sculpted wood, ceramics, and stone, as well as designing exquisite silver jewelry, all since the late 1950s.

She left New York for San Francisco in 1977, took time out in 1984 and '85 to travel around America, Canada, and Mexico in a van, selling her ceramics as she travelled, and moved to the coastal community of Pacifica, outside San Francisco, in 1989. She remained an avid outdoorswoman: a canoist, camper, and kayaker. At the age of 76, Ruth had a hip-replacement operation, because she was having trouble getting into and out of her kayak. She lived a full life, only part of which was dedicated to comics, but it remains, artistically and historically, an important part.

Manga Entertainment releases first anime DVD in July

By Matt Brady

Manga Entertainment will release its first animated Japanese film in digital video disc (DVD) format July 15, with the DVD release of Ghost in the Shell.

Manga's Danielle Opyt said, "As far as we know, we're the first ever to release a major anime feature in the DVD format. We thought it would be very appropriate to usher in this new technology with the most advanced anime film to date."

The DVD format allows viewers to select from multiple languages: English, Japanese, English subtitled, or close-captioned. Other menu option features allow viewers to select from picture files, character biographies, production notes, and chapter stops. The DVD version will also contain the original theatrical trailer.

In addition, the DVD version will include a 30-minute Making of Ghost in the Shell bonus program, a production report detailing the making of the movie. The DVD film retails for $29.95.

Stars Trek and Wars, Hollywood's newest $20+ million man, and Buffy screams

★ Star Trek IX: The Yet Unnamed Movie is slowly starting to come together.

According to Variety, Michael Piller is at work on a script that's been likened to Joseph Conrad's Heart of Darkness for Picard, while Patrick Stewart recently agreed to a deal with Paramount that will earn him $12 million for reprising his role as Picard, as well as getting him an associate producer credit and a three-year, first-look deal with the studio.

No word on wheter he's signed on the Enterprise-E as Riker yet, but Jonathan Frakes just signed a two-year, first-look agreement where, along with his production company, Goepp Circle, Frakes will develop and direct feature films for Paramount. The inside word has Frakes signing on as both William Riker and director for the upcoming Star Trek feature. Also, Brent Spiner is expected to return as Data for $5 million. If all goes well, the film is slated to hit theaters in time for the 1998 holiday season.

★ In other Star Trek news, expect a bizarre new crew member to sign on with the Voyager crew next with the upcoming season premiere. "Seven of Nine" a Borg disconnected from The Collective, will end up on the lost ship and have to adapt to human society in "The Scorpion part 2" this fall. "Seven of Nine," a human girl who was assimilated by The Borg, will be played by Jeri Ryan (Dark Skies), and will be neither fully Borg nor fully human, but an amalgamation of the two.

★ It's becoming more and more official. Entertainment Weekly and Entertainment Tonight recently reported that the Star Wars prequels are mostly cast, with only a few question marks left to be filled. To date the record stands at: Ewan McGregor (Ben Kenobi), Liam Neeson (Jedi Knight), Natalie Portman (Lady Anakin Skywalker), and Jake Lloyd (young Anakin Skywalker). Other names reportedly being bandied about the Lucasfilm lots: Claudia Ramirez (Lady Kenobi), Harry Connick Jr. (a Jedi), Samuel L. Jackson, and Sir Alec Guiness (perhaps narrating the three movies), Terence Stamp (Superman 2), and Adrian Dunbar (My Left Foot).

Also, in the same issue of EW, Irvin Kershner, director of The Empire Strikes Back, said that George Lucas wants Steven Spielberg to direct Prequel #2, and rumors are starting to circulate that Luc Besson is being courted for the director's spot on Prequel #3.

★ Newsday's Liz Smith reported that Twentieth Century Fox execs, who were anxiously awaiting to see how many dollars The Fifth Element pulled in, were very pleased with the numbers and green-lighted the next Bruce Willis action-fest, Die Hard 4. Smith reported that Willis will be paid $25 million for the movie, a figure that Fox execs are now hotly (and publicly) disputing.

★ Smith also reported that, fresh off of Men in Black, Will Smith will star in the big screen version of The Wild, Wild West. Barry Sonnerfeld (MIB) is set to direct. No word on whether or not Smith will wear the skintight pants made famous by Robert Conrad.

★ Finally, Smith reported the rumor that Madonna is being considered for the Harley Quinn role in the next Batman movie.

★ Sarah Michelle Gellar, star of Tony Isabella's favorite new show, Buffy the Vampire Slayer, can now add a new credit to her resumé: movie star. Gellar is set to join the cast of Scream II, which started filming June 15. The film will reunite original cast members Neve Campbell, Courtney Cox, and David Arquette in their original roles, and Wes Craven will direct from a screenplay by Kevin Williamson.

★ In an unprecedented move, Variety reported that the Fox network has paid $80 million for the rights to show The Lost World 10 times over 12 years. The move left all the major pay-television players out in the cold, and will allow Fox to air the movie beginning a year and a half after its theatrical run, rather than waiting the normal three years. Look for it in the 1999 sweeps season.

★ It looks like the next Philip K. Dick novel to make it to the big screen will be an adaptation of his 1977 science-fiction thriller Scanner Darkly. The story focuses on a narcotics officer who gets hooked on drugs himself, loses his job, but still suffers from the effects of his abuse. Reportedly, the story draws on Dick's own experiences with drugs. If it sounds like a left-fielder to you, one word: Trainspotting. Drug abuse is hip in Hollywood.

Scanner Darkly is set to be directed by Emma-Kate Croghan, and is being developed by Universal Studios and Danny Devito's Jersey Films production company.

★ Finally, in a scary William Gibson-esque twist, Wired reported that Japan's Shimizu Corporation, the world's fourth largest construction firm, has developed plans for a 50-story orbiting hotel, complete with a wedding hall.

The entire structure will rotate three times per minute to re-create 70% Earth gravity. Make your reservations now; a spokesman for Shimizu says they expect capacity booking when the hotel opens in 2020.

The untimely death of Mark Gruenwald has probably made more than a few editors, if not comics professionals as a whole, sit up and take notice — particularly those who are 15-20 year veterans, most of whom are around the same age Gruenwald was. I'm certain that, in several respects, his passing is being viewed much like that of the passing of Carol Kalish five years ago, and many of you find yourselves asking that most bewildering question: Why?

I never had the opportunity to so much as meet Gruenwald, let alone get to know him, for which I am certain I have suffered an incalculable loss. Unfortunately, far too many of today's fans saw him merely as an editor at Marvel. Few have been the times where I have heard or seen his work as a writer complimented.

In 1985 or 1986, Gruenwald wrote what stands out in my mind as one of the best limited series that Marvel has ever produced: Squadron Supreme. Sadly, it was overshadowed by the overwhelming success of comics like Dark Knight Returns and Watchmen. This is not to demean the works of the creators involved in those two projects, but Gruenwald — well, he was overlooked. He had written an entertaining work about characters that previously had only made guest appearances in the Avengers and original Defenders titles.

And what about his efforts on the New Universe title D.P.7? Combining common elements of the super-hero genre with elements of the political and medical thriller, Gruenwald was years ahead of his time on that title. Had he written this as an all-prose work, I wouldn't be surprised to have seen the success equal that of a Michael Crichton.

Not to mention his runs on Captain America and Quasar would be doing the man's memory a disservice. He took two characters who, in and of themselves, are difficult to maintain momentum on and wrote consistently entertaining material on them for years.

And unless I'm mistaken, Gruenwald (along with Peter Sanderson, Greg Wright, and others) spearheaded the *Marvel Universe Update*s from 1986 through 1990.

Through it all, this man received little recognition for his efforts. As far as I know, he never received so much as a nomination for any award given in this industry. He never worked on any of Marvel's mainstay titles, like Spider-Man or X-Men.

Yet never have I heard nor seen any evidence of Mark Gruenwald complaining. Mark Gruenwald loved comics, the sheer joy of creation. He was Marvel Comics' utility infielder — the man who has a mediocre batting average and rarely hits a home run but always comes up with the clutch hit. His stories may not have been the most memorable in comics fiction, but they were always entertaining.

Perhaps what Mark Gruenwald best represents is the demise of an entire generation of creators in this industry in the form of one man. Not meaning to make it sound like Gruenwald's contributions to the field were as great as the Golden Age creators like Kirby, Siegel and Shuster, Wood, etc. No, Gruenwald was simply a throwback to those greats. Unlike so many of his contemporaries, he never publicly displayed any of the bitterness or the disillusionment that he and all creators face when working in this industry, be it spoken or written, and it certainly didn't show up in his work. His efforts never came across to me as that of a man doing the job for the paycheck, never merely going through the motions, looking for the next stepping stone to greatness. No matter what he did, there was always an intangible quality and intrinsic value to a Mark Gruenwald story, a quality many of today's writers and artists sorely lack.

Mark Gruenwald may have been the last bastion of faith between a creator and fandom.

But Mark Gruenwald should not be lamented. He should, instead, be praised, as he never was in life, for the hero he truly was. He fought the fight so many other creators have left behind — the battle to be himself and to tell the stories he wanted to tell. In a day and age where everyone's more concerned about creators' rights, toy lines, and multimedia deals, Gruenwald did what he did because he loved creating, and the creating was all that mattered to him — all that should matter to any so-called creator in comics. It was a fight that took its toll far too soon (and right when we, the fans, needed him most), but his was a courageous fight, nonetheless.

Mark Gruenwald's life and death serve as a reminder that, although this is a business, the dreams it represents for creators and fans alike are far greater and more important than that business. The comics field is not merely a business, no matter how hard corporations try to make it so. Comics are a collaborative art form. The apathy that fandom has expressed toward creators and publishers alike stems from the fact that you have forgotten this was the direct result of creators giving up their creative spirit in favor of the dollar to the shareholders, who care nothing about the characters, the fans, or the creators and employees under them. Gruenwald never gave that up. But, alas, he was only one man. tackling a burden far too large for any one person to carry. He simply couldn't handle the pressures he took upon himself, all for the love of comics.

He wasn't a fan favorite; he never received an Eisner or an Inkpot or an Eagle Award. But neither did he allow his successes to go to his head. I hope that somebody in this field can learn from his example.

Good-bye, Mark Gruenwald. It's been fun.

[We had electronically misplaced this letter — you don't want to know all the details — until another electronic filter turned it up, as we were putting this week's letters column together.

Frankly, it couldn't have happened better had we planned it this way, because comics readers have, indeed, paid tribute via their CBG Fan Awards votes to Gruenwald's efforts for the field. (And we are happy to point out that Mark had won the CBG Fan Award for Favorite Editor for 1987, as well. We like to think he realized that many, many people liked him for himself and admired him for his professional accomplishments.)]

Correction: In your March 21 issue you printed that Brainstorm Comics' first creator-owned title was Vamperotica. This is wrong.

It was Nyght School #1 and #2. Likewise, a title called Intrazone, also creator-owned, ran before Vamperotica. In the case of Nyght School, the series creator (me) took the vampire-based title away from Brainstorm.

Nyght School is now self-published by Brahless Comics.

I understand the misinformation printed was due to a simple misunderstanding.

Please help me to feel better by informing your readership.

Thanks for your great publication! I look forward to it every week.

Regarding some recent letters about women's breasts in comics: Chuck Fould's letter in CBG #1228 suggests that the male attributes to compare properly with a female's breasts would be such secondary sex characteristics as broad shoulders, facial and body hair, and large muscles. While it is true that all of those are, like breasts, secondary sex characteristics, it seems to me that, in our culture, breasts have a much stronger sexual connotation than a male's muscles or beard.

I think heroines are drawn with huge breasts in part to appeal to the fantasies of male readers. Still, as a woman comics reader, I am not offended by heroines with large breasts. I don't care much for the ones with breasts the size of watermelons, but any overly distorted portrayal of the human anatomy seems to me ridiculous — except in a comic book or cartoon (such as The Tick) where that is part of the style.

In all my years of comics reading, going back to the early '50s, I do not ever recall seeing a woman breastfeeding in a comic book. Wouldn't it be interesting, after women's breasts appearing so often in comics to feed adolescent fantasies, to see a woman's breasts feeding a baby? It's what they're designed for, after all.

After publishing Small Press Comics Explosion and the C&T Graphics line of independent comics six years ago, I had to take some time off to "put my house in order" and build a sign business here in Allegany County. It's great to be back. My two sons will both be in school in the fall, and that will free up a lot of time. I'm sure every parent in the business already knows the lyrics to this song, but the time I was spending making comics was time taken away from my kids.

I will be bringing back Mightyguy, Elasticworm, and a host of new characters that have been on the back burner since 1991. I'll be publishing some mini-comics and some digests and I'll be getting back into the independent market by next year with some titles under my New Voice Media label.

As I scan Comics Buyer's Guide, I see that a lot of the folks who were making mini-comics back in the 1980s are doing professional work these days. I find this enormously satisfying. I guess maybe Small Press Comics Explosion made a little difference, after all.

I'd love to hear from any of the old friends from the SPCE days who care to write me.

R.C. Harvey

[Editors' Note: This portion of this letter was written some time ago.] It's probably too late to bring this up, but — what the hey? — I'll do it anyhow.

Steven Weiner noted (in "Who is Will Eisner" in CBG #1202) various places in which Eisner's work has been assessed. At the risk of seeming self-serving to the nth degree, I submit, with captivating modesty, that Eisner is featured in two chapters of my book The Art of the Comic Book (University Press of Mississippi, 1996; merely $19.95 while supplies last).

In one chapter devoted entirely to Eisner, I trace his professional biography and discuss the (considerable) influence he had on shaping the infant comic-book medium. In another chapter, I analyze the narrative technique in a complete Spirit story. The book devotes similar sections to the influence of Jack Kirby, Harvey Kurtzman, Frank Miller, Robert Crumb, and others.

But, to return to Eisner, I don't think his work has been analyzed anywhere else as thoroughly as in my book. Captivatingly modest, that's me. But the only reason I mention all this here is that, if I don't mention it, apparently no one else will. A Re: Terry and the Pirates and Caniff, CBG #1228.

I was on the road when #1228 came, so I didn't get to Patrick Daniel O'Neill's pieces on Caniff and Wunder and Terry and the Pirates until this afternoon. A couple of footnotes might be in order:

First, as Caniff originally conceived the strip, there were no pirates in the title. It was the publisher of the New York Daily News, Joseph Patterson, who added "and the Pirates" to one of the strip names Caniff had submitted to him. (As Caniff saw it, the strip would have just the name of its protagonist, Terry.) This was the same Patterson who had named Chester Gould's strip Plainclothes Tracy instead of Dick Tracy. And he'd told Harold Gray to change his orphan character to a boy. In other words, Patterson added a good deal to the strips he nurtured. But Caniff always somewhat vaguely resented the "and the Pirates" subtitle. It locked you in, he told me once: You always had to have pirates in the stories, or people would wonder where the strip's title came from.

The villains in the first daily sequence were river pirates. But for most of the strip's first two years, it was quite another pirate that gave substance to the strip's title: Caniff kept his most famous of all creations, the pirate queen called the Dragon Lady, on stage in the Sunday sequences (which, at first, told separate stories from the daily strips) from the beginning on Dec. 9, 1934, until Aug. 23, 1936 (except for a brief interlude from March to September 1935), and in August 1936, the Dragon Lady began a villainous appearance in the daily strips that lasted until Feb. 3, 1937. In other words, except for the six-month period in 1935, the Dragon Lady was constantly in the strip — the most conspicuous pirate of them all — for 20 of the first 26 months of the strip's run.

Incidentally, Caniff did not (a recent printed report to the contrary) leave Terry in a dispute with the Chicago Tribune-Daily News Syndicate. Caniff left because Marshall Field, who was just starting the Chicago Sun to compete with Robert McCormick's Chicago Tribune, needed outstanding cartoonists to fill his comics page, and he asked Caniff what he, Caniff, might want in order to come to work for the Sun. Caniff quickly responded: complete editorial control and full ownership of the strip. He had neither with the Tribune-News. Field agreed, and suddenly Caniff was a lame duck on Terry. But he had two years (1945 and 1946) of his contract to go: He had just signed a two-year contract in October, and Field had approached him the following month. So Caniff set out to do the very best work of his career on Terry. "I wanted them to miss me when I was gone," he told me.

Caniff said he always felt a sympathetic twinge for his successor, George Wunder, whom he did not meet until several months after Wunder assumed command of Terry. Caniff knew Wunder had to feel awkward taking over a strip that popular — when the originator was still around to "look over his shoulder." Caniff said he felt Wunder did a great job continuing the strip. But he also felt Wunder's forte was in the secondary characters — Spray O'Hara, Snapper Brassard, and the like. Most of Caniff's original cast came back for an encore, all except one. Burma never appeared in Wunder's Terry.

Enough. Just thought I'd add to the lore a little.

First, sincere thanks for reviewing my comic book, Bombastic, in your Juggling Multiple Titles section. It's refreshing to get some press on the book. I'm glad you liked Wingnut and Fidget so much.

Your comments about the features being too short has been taken to heart. I have received similar comments from other readers that they liked all the characters but felt the shortness of the stories to be frustrating. I've also heard from the other camp, which thinks that all the features are great and enjoys the variety my comic book offers. I'm so torn.

On one hand, my attention-deficit brain likes having so many features. You should see all the characters I've got stored away in my fevered mind. On the other hand, I can see where longer stories would be beneficial.

I've come to an agreeable compromise. Bombastic #15 will expand to 32 pages and feature only Wingnut and Fidget, Bratterskain, and Cascade. With issue #7, Wingnut and Fidget will expand to 10 pages and become the lead feature. Bratterskain and Cascade will continue to run in six to seven-page segments.

The dream scenario you put forth of doing a monthly book with my features would be a dream come true. Ultimately, I would love to do this full-time and bring out the comic book more frequently, but my numbers are just not to that point yet and I need to pay the bills — a plight I'm sure other self-publishers find themselves in, as well. I teach elementary school during the day, and it is a job that requires much of my time. It's a staggering feat for me to get out three or four issues a year. All I ask is that the readers stick to my comic book and realize I am committed to doing this project for the rest of my life. It's a dream project, and I hope that fans will not let the frequency of Bombastic keep them from trying out my whimsical, slaphappy creation.

Second, I would like to suggest my list of comics that are truly fun reading: Dreamwalker, Brilliant Boy, Lunar Donut, Mr. Beat, Finder, Quicken Forbidden, The Wretch, Thieves and Kings, Poe, Tug and Buster, Radical Dreamer, Pakkin's Land, Skeleton Key, Kane, Dusty Star, Hellboy, Copybook Tales, Soulwind, Monsterman, Steviebear, Leave It to Chance, PattyCake, Bone, Skeleton Key, Coventry, Akiko, Replacement God, Books of Magic, and just about anything else that has a whimsical and sincere touch to it.

Third, I was curious whether any other readers out there feel it's time for Doug Moench to bring back Aztec Ace. I've sorely missed his time-traveling hijinks.

[Editors' Note: This portion of this letter, too, was written a couple of months ago.] Wolff and Byrd conclude another case, having skated over the thin ice of good taste, with Loppitt vs. Loppitt. Can Batton Lash provoke and entertain us any further than this? Looking forward to it.

Another troublemaker is Dave Sim, who's been filling Cerebus back pages with acute and well-honed words on television, comic books, viewerships, readers, and readerships.

I hope you'll allow me to encourage readers and viewers to form readerships for a few more self-published, small-press titles. The Monster achieves the amazing: a new take on Frankenstein, with a remarkable personality and attitude — oddly but exceedingly well-written and, oddly but exceedingly well-drawn by Derek Ring, 86 Florence, #1, Worchester, MA 01603. Next issue: "Frankenstein Meets Dracula?" I expect the unexpected and excellent entertainment.

Explorers takes a family into extreme dangers (killer robots; ancient, underground Aztecs) which they handle with aplomb and much shooting, with a lot of reliance upon each other's quick thinking — and trust. Comparisons to Jonny Quest are inevitable but agreeable: What makes the best JQ is also here, by writer Terry Collins and pencillers Brian Hodges and Bill Neville, from Tapestry/Explorer Press, 225 N. Sheldon Rd., Plymount, MI 48170.

S.R. Bissette's SpiderBaby Comics are Mom's horror: yucky, disgusting short comics stories with dinosaurs ripping each other apart, rotting people, art either too knife-sharp or too gooey to touch. And that little sprig of wry humor that makes it even worse: most notable in "Cries from the Vegetable Kingdom" and "The Tell-Tale Fart" (its title is its most socially redeeming feature), An engaging retrospective of "my old laundry" from the Swamp Thing and Tyrant artist. SpiderBaby Graphix, P.O. Box 442, Wilmington, VT 05363.

Also, Bissette's Tyrant has returned, #4 in an astonishing series, exciting to look at, well-told, with humor and clear characterization, which brings us to the hatching of little T-rex sister and brother.

Linda Medley's astonishing Castle Waiting tops its previous (unnumbered) issue with wit and stylish flourish, grace, and grinning in a story of the flight of a young medieval woman from father's castle to the streets of Bremen Town in time for the music festival. Castle Waiting adds a cupful of puns (verbal and visual) to incredible one-page cameos of other fairy tales. From Olio Press/Tapestry, P.O. Box 1012, Petaluma, CA 94953.

A kid named Tommy has moved to a new town, Weirdsville. Just for starters there's Monty, a talking snake, and Zeke and Elmo, two of three luckless brothers trying to cross the street. Beautiful use of black and white; absolutely engaging characters, created by Franco Aureliani (concept and pencils) and Brothers Three Mazzotta (script), from Blindwolf Comics, P.O. Box 465 Cross River, NY 10518.

Dr. Cyborg by Allan Gross, art by Mark Wheatley, Marc Hempel, and Damon Willis, is a paranoid thriller about a bodiless master scientist, the wicked government, and a story that curls around itself tightly, with excellent art, sometimes ultra-real, sometimes fantastic, from Attention! Publishing, 7844 Saint Thomas Dr., Baltimore, MD 21236.

A Touch of Silver is a story, just begun, of a boy's escape from unhappy and verbally abusive parents and peer prejudice into comic books. With only a first issue, characters are a little one-dimensional, and the tone is depressing, but clearly the story is headed for depths and balance; the art by Jim Valentino is clean and smooth, from Image Comics, going for the heart.

Page 45 in Cerebus #216's back pages puts forward the laudable approach that marketing comics as independent or small press is to limit their appeal, when, in fact, these are mainstream adult fiction, biography, fantasy, essay. Thanks for the recent CBG featuring several of the better-known of these.

I'm looking forward to when, more and more, readers step out of the backwaters of trademark super-heroes and into the new mainstream. "Take chances, make mistakes, get messy" (as says Ms. Frizzle): Try Armature, Rib, Soulwind, Keyhole, Coventry, DarkLight, DreamWalker, Nowhere, Hilly Rose, Age of Heroes, Ballads and Sagas, Espers — take a chance!

[Editors' Note: And this letter was just received.]

There's just so much happening — please, let me air some more excellent comic books from the independent, self-publishing, and small-press arenas:

The Bandy Man, by Stefan Petrucha, art by Jill Thompson and Charles Adlard, is set in ancient Jerusalem and contemporary San Francisco. Biblical, not particularly religious, a story of mystery and intrigue, in excellent blacks and whites, tightly written, from Caliber Comics, 225 N. Sheldon, Plymouth, MI 48170.

The Monster achieves the amazing: a new take on Frankenstein with a remarkable personality and attitude: oddly but exceedingly well-written and well-drawn by Derek Ring, 86 Florence #1, Worchester, MA 01603.

Explorers takes a family into dangers (killer robots, ancient underground Aztecs) which they handle with aplomb and much shooting, with a lot of reliance upon each other's quick thinking and trust. And that little sprig of wry humor that makes it even worse, most notable in "Cries from the Vegetable Kingdom" and "The Tell-Tale Fart" (the title is its most socially redeeming feature). An engaging retrospective of "my old laundry" (Bissette's) from the Swamp Thing and Tyrant artist of SpiderBaby Graphix, P.O. Box 442, Wilmington, VT 05363.

And Bissette's Tyrant has returned with #4 in an astonishing series: exciting to look at, well-told, with humor and clear characterization, which brings us to the hatching of the little T. rex sister and brother.

Kane is a good, solid, stay-with-ya police story of realistic city employees, male and female, criminals, petty and big, and Kane, the cop who killed his partner. By Paul Grist, from Dancing Elephant Press 207 Marcliffe Rd., Sheffield S6 4AH, England.

Marcus Lusk's Tales from the Bog tells a pleasant tale of a pleasant town where boys find Armageddon in the death of comic-book hero Cobweb and folks take it to heart when a friend dies — told with warmth, good humor, very cartoony characters, and a good bit of wit from Aberration Press, 416 Cahaba Park Circle, Suite 107-B, Birmingham, AL 35242.

Mister Blank is wryly funny, evocatively drawn: an office guy drawn into a world of cloaked assassins and into assuming a courage of superheroic proportion, written and drawn by Christopher Hicks, from Amaze Ink/Slave Labor Graphics, 979 S. Bascomb Ave., San Jose, CA 95128.

Coming soon, with great promise: Finder, by Carla Speed McNeil: future world of sand, poverties, keepers of alien beasts, collectors of ancient (1990s) artifacts, and of a self-healing "finder." From Carla, 1452 Middletown Rd., Annapolis, MD 41401.

Explorers/Cavewoman, a crossover that makes sense, shows imagination, and has good solid work from both titles behind it.

Matt Wagner's Mage: the return of Kevin Matchstick/King Arthur in a city streets grail-quest and a study of courage.

Darklight by Wandering Star writer-artist Teri Sue Woods.

Amy Racecar, by Stray Bullets writer-artist David Lapham.

Bliss Alley by Bill Messnor-Loebs, once again on his own, who created the bear-racin', twister-ridin' multi-lingual marksman extraordinaire, Wolverine MacAllistaire, in Journey.

I encourage everyone to catch onto these early.

I love the term "retro-comics." It's fun and succinctly describes a delightful trend running through this industry. However, possibly the term needs to be a little more defined. I suggest this because I can't figure out how Kingdom Come qualifies as a retro-comic.

Retro-comics star or guest-star characters (or pastiches of characters) from the Golden and Silver Ages of comics. OK. Kingdom Come fits this, but certainly there must be more to it than that.

Retro-comics feature heroes behaving heroically. Maybe all's well that ends well, but I seem to recall that the heroes, in the best interests of society, spend a lot of time setting up a tyranny and another set of heroes teams up with the villians. This is hardly my definition of heroic behavior.

Retro-comics feature light-hearted action and humor over deep philosophical themes: Kansas destroyed by a nuclear bomb. A depressed hero retires. A war between heroes and villains. If this is considered light-hearted action, I've no interest in serious stories. The art of Kingdom Come may not be dark and moody, but I think there's a lot of "grim and gritty" in the story.

Retro-comics are often drawn in styles reminiscent of the Golden and Silver Ages of comics. I'm not a comics historian but I don't recall too many painted stories in comics' early days.

Retro-comics are done by creators with a love and reverence for comics' past history.

There's no doubt that Mark Waid loves the Golden and Silver Ages of comics, but does that mean that every comic book he does is automatically a retro-comic? Just because Alex Ross' Marvels was a retro-comic doesn't mean that Kingdom Come is. Or does it?

Clearly I'm missing something. Like most of comics fandom, I loved Kingdom Come but, while almost everyone else considers Kingdom Come a retro-comic, I'm shaking my head in confusion. It seems to me that in theme and story content Kingdom Come has far more in common with Dark Knight Returns and Watchmen. Regardless, it's certainly worthy of its many Eisner nominations.

[I fear that the term "retro-comics" is a vague description which means whatever the writer points to when he or she uses the term — as opposed to the term "retcon," which actually describes a specific storytelling trait.]

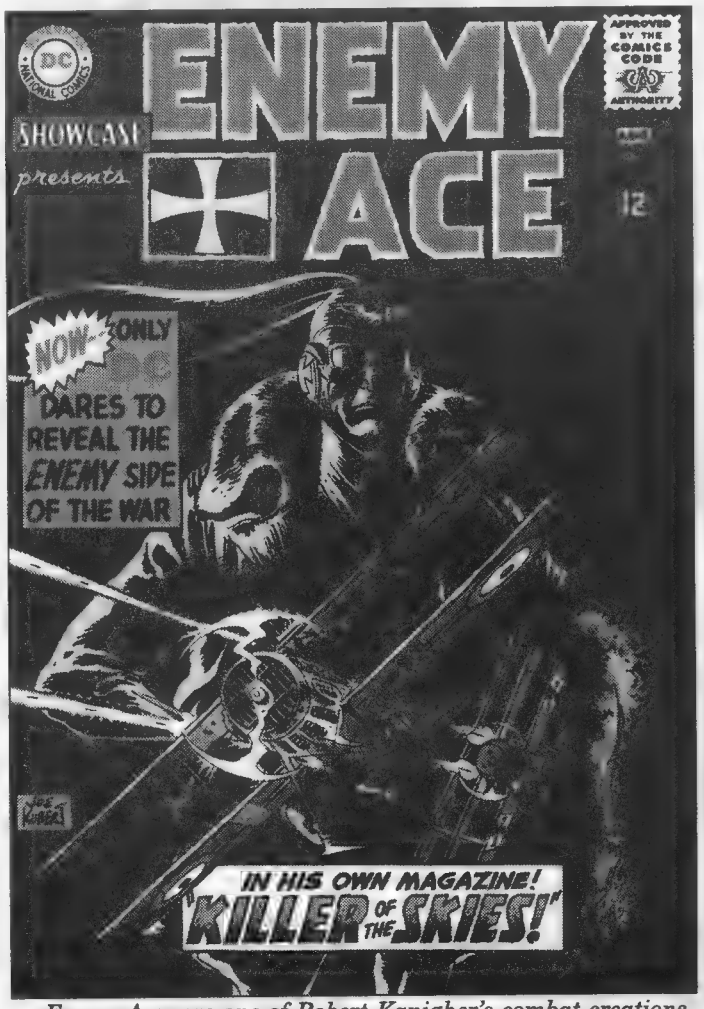
Comics conventions have a way of honoring artists and forgetting that comics have writers, too. So that's one of two reasons I'm delighted that the San Diego Comic-Con is honoring Robert Kanigher this year. The other, of course, is that Kanigher's career in comics is eminently overdue for a salute. He has been one of comics' best and most prolific authors for his long, distinguished career, and a major influence on many who followed.

"Interestingly, the most talked-about of Kanigher's Rock tales is one that he never wrote — the last Rock tale, the death of Sgt. Frank Rock."
— Mark Evanier

Many of you probably think of him, first and foremost, as the writer — and, for a long time, editor — of DC's war comics. He did Sgt. Rock for so long that my heart broke the first time I picked up an issue and found that it had been written by someone else. I forget who did it or what happened in it, but I sure recall not recognizing the guy wearing the stripes that month. (There are Uncle Scrooge fans who believe that, if Barks didn't draw it, the story didn't happen. I think I feel that way about Sgt. Rock tales not by Kanigher.)



Enemy Ace was one of Robert Kanigher's combat creations. The stories of the German World War I flying ace ran in Showcase, Our Army at War, and Star Spangled War Stories.

Interestingly, the most talked-about of Kanigher's Rock tales is one that he never wrote — the last Rock tale, the death of Sgt. Frank Rock. Despite tales by others that attempted to establish that Rock had survived World War II, Kanigher's instincts as a writer told him otherwise.

In his letter pages, many of which candidly divulged his feelings about his work, he teased that he might some day write that last story. He also admitted that he feared the prospect and might never be able to bring himself to that moment. Rock, after hundreds of narratives, had become a part of him and you don't just lop off a part of yourself for X dollars per page.

As far as I know, Kanigher has never finished that story. I do know we've never seen it and I will be surprised — though fascinated — if ever we do. Part of me no more wants to read it than R.K. wants to write it, but, if he ever does, I'm there.

Rock was Kanigher's longest-running combat series. His most acclaimed was probably Enemy Ace, a penetrating World War I series told from the German point-o'-view. Comics today are filled with cold and violent protagonists, but, at the time, the depiction of Rittmeister Hans Von Hammer was revolutionary. It ran intermittently in Our Army at War, Showcase, and Star-Spangled War Stories, never quite catching on. But, in part because of superb art by Joe Kubert, it was always too good for DC to give up on it.

Enemy Ace was, I said at the time, my favorite Kanigher combat creation. Still, there was always something that bothered me about the series of stories, some feeling of nonfulfillment about it. Not long ago, I went back and reread them and now, with enormous presumption and a wee bit of hindsight, I think I see what was bugging me and, perhaps, why it didn't last as long as most other Kanigher war strips. This, moreso than Sgt. Rock, was the strip crying out for a "last" story.

Von Hammer's was not a multi-faceted personality. He had no friends, but for a wolf he encountered on lone walks through the Black Forest. He lived only for the death of others — always treated as a matter of dignity between two warriors of the skies. But a Killing Machine — as they called the Enemy Ace — does not retire in peace. A Killing Machine must be killed by another Killing Machine.

Which presented a dilemma. Enemy Ace was an ongoing series, or at least it tried to be, and a non-fantasy ongoing series doesn't ongo for long if the hero dies. Kanigher did such a thorough job of probing his character's mind that, after a story or three, you knew all about the guy. You ached for his story to progress to another level.

But it couldn't. Not without killing the title character.

Today, I would rank Kanigher's other war comics higher and Enemy Ace lower than I did at the time. On the other hand, I think that, if the mini-series had then been invented (it hadn't) and if Kanigher and Kubert had chronicled Von Hammer's career in perhaps a year's run, culminating in his noble demise, DC would currently have Enemy Ace: The Collected Works in its 27th printing.

What would I rank higher? Well, a lot of those Sgt. Rock stories, to begin with. And I really liked a short-lived series he did, with artists Jerry Grandenetti and Mort Drucker, spotlighting a leader of the French resistance named Mlle. Marie. It was great, as was an even shorter-lived series he did for All-American Men of War called Steve Savage, Balloon Buster.

For a time in the '60s, perhaps inspired in part by John Kennedy's much-chronicled exploits as a PT boat commander, Kanigher wrote a splendid, unheralded comic for DC about a PT boat commander named Captain Storm. It was a "quieter" battle comic book than some, which may explain why it didn't last, but I thought it showed Kanigher at his best.

These weren't all the war strips Kanigher did. Just off the top of my head, I can also mention Johnny Cloud, The Haunted Tank, Gunner & Sarge, Captain Hunter, Hunter's Hellcats, and The Losers. Some very fine work in there. I also enjoyed many of Kanigher's non-series war stories. (Anyone here remember "The Glory Boys?")

And then there was The War That Time Forgot, a series that pitted soldiers against dinosaurs in Star-Spangled War Stories. Historian (and Kanigher scholar) Robin Snyder wrote recently that fandom had scorned this material at the time, and I respectfully disagree. I was buying comics when these first came out and I remember fans loving that quirky bit of anachronism. With Jurassic Park and similar films sucking up millions, I think someone's missing a bet not to resurrect those tales.

Finally, I'm not sure it should be classed with the war comics but I always enjoyed Sea Devils, which Kanigher created, edited, and wrote for several years. Others carried on this present-day tale of a team of skin divers, but it was never as good as when Kanigher had it.

It was surely a coincidence, but the basic make-up of the Sea Devils team foreshadowed the membership of The Fantastic Four, which came along a year later. The Sea Devils were made up of a handsome scientist type, his blonde lady friend, her impulsive younger brother, and a strongman pal. So was The Fantastic Four.

Not only that, but an early Sea Devils storyline found the scientist type and the blonde lady in a romantic triangle, the third member of which was an amphibious merman. Later, in FF, Reed and Sue would quarrel over Sue's friendship (romance?) with the undersea Sub-Mariner. As I said, surely a coincidence — but an interesting one, you must admit.

For a guy who wrote so many war comics, Kanigher certainly wrote an amazing number wherein no one pointed a howitzer at anyone. When Julius Schwartz edited the revival of The Flash in 1956 — the comic book that kicked off the so-called Silver Age of Comics — the writer selected for the task was Kanigher. (He'd written super-guys before, including the first Flash and others for DC and others — like Steel Sterling — for MLJ. He also, of course, wrote Wonder Woman for several thousand years. By an odd coincidence, as I am writing this, Nick at Nite is on TV. On The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Mary Richards is describing her favorite girlhood comic book — an issue of Wonder Woman in which she fought the insidious villain, Egg Fu. It was, of course, a Kanigher.)

If I had to pick one favorite Kanigher comic book, I would probably opt for Metal Men, at least in its early numbers. Incredibly, this was not a long-planned, painstakingly devel-

Woof, Woof — More Barks. Bruce Hamilton is to be commended for editorial perspicacity, publishing courage, and artistic taste. We are grateful to him for recognizing that Carl Barks' cartoon work for an obscure 1930s humor magazine, if reprinted 60 years later, would make a valuable and delightful contribution to our understanding and appreciation of The Duck Man. We admire him for going ahead with the project. And we think the publication in question, The Unexpurgated Carl Barks, is an elegant little book, beautifully designed and executed, contents thoughtfully selected and artfully arranged for readers' education as well as enjoyment.

There.

And just in case I haven't made myself abundantly clear, I like this tidy little $9.95 64-page 6x9˝ square-bound booklet — a lot.

For those who came in late (you, there — the fella all by himself next to the door), Barks didn't spend his entire life drawing Donald Duck and Uncle Scrooge for Western Publishing. He also worked in the Mouse Factory for a few years, helping to animate Mickey and his ensemble. And before that, in the late 1920s, he worked as a repairman in a railroad yard in Roseville, Calif. While in the railroad game, Barks began moonlighting cartoons to such humor magazines of the era as Judge and College Humor. He also submitted cartoons to a little-known publication called The Calgary Eye-Opener, which had been founded in 1902 in Canada but which since 1922 had been published in Minneapolis.

In 1928, The Eye-Opener bought some of his cartoons. Then, in 1931, the magazine was sold, and the new publisher, casting about for a productive editorial staff, saw Barks' work and asked him to join the staff. In November, Barks bundled his worldly goods in a single valise and journeyed to the Midwest. And, for the next four years, he was the magazine's associate editor and chief staff cartoonist.

A recounting of Barks' association with the magazine takes place in the Hamilton book's opening pages. And, in those same pages, we read a short history of "naughty" humor magazines that followed in the footsteps of Captain Billy's Whiz Bang, which began in 1920 as little more than mimeographed pages of jokes stapled together. The Eye-Opener was in the Whiz Bang tradition: "Pocket-size and printed on cheap paper, it was packed with saucy rhymes, anecdotes about virginity preserved and lost, and pen-and-ink cartoons showing a little too much leg to be respectable," as Geoffrey Blum says in his valuable Preface.

The Unexpurgated Carl Barks supplies a pretty fair, albeit spare, sampling of the kind of thing these magazines were so adept at. Barks' cartoons are often accompanied by bits of double-entendre verse or jokes with deliciously bad puns — just as they, and all other cartoons in the magazine, were accompanied in their initial published state.

The editors serve up their material in sections that group cartoons and text roughly by subject: girls and sexy innuendo, barnyard humor, boozers and losers, continuing characters, preachers, cops and judges and the law, circuses, freaks, "ugly hags and fat bags," and "leggy lassies" to list a few of the headings.

Barks provided cartoons in all the categories of the humor of the period, sometimes sexist and racist but no more so than any of his colleagues of that time. His drawings are neat and cleanly rendered, better made than many of this ilk at the time — nothing special, though nothing spectacular. Just uncluttered art with deftly spotted blacks, appealing in its simplicity but otherwise partaking of the cartoon styles of the day (with a generous nod to John Held Jr. and Russell Patterson, whose influence was pervasive throughout the '20s and well into the '30s).

The prurient interests of that era were enflamed more by stocking tops, garters, and lace underwear than outright nakedness, so we find little nudity in this book. But we find a lot of color: Hamilton has supplied color for all the cartoons despite their having made their maiden voyage in black-and-white.

The little book is simply jammed with visual delights, both large and small. Tiny corner drawings yield an animated cartoon in the "flip book" tradition. And every drawing is dated! A scholar's dream come true.

The collection, Hamilton takes pains to point out, is unauthorized. Barks did not approve of it. But, Hamilton says, "It is our hope that he may come to appreciate our desire to preserve this important early chapter of his work, and the care and respect with which the present collection was made."

Point of View

oped creation. One day in 1962, Jack Liebowitz — who then ran DC — discovered that he had an upcoming issue of Showcase and nothing to showcase in it.

Usually, entries in DC's tryout series were long-planned, but one had fallen out and Liebowitz needed a replacement practically overnight. Of all the men in his corps, Kanigher was hailed as the swiftest. Today, if you read Showcase #37, you'd scarcely believe it was cobbled up in the time some other writers would spend putting in a new typewriter ribbon.

The story of the benevolent Doc Magnus and his peculiar robotic creations made its debut in close-to-finished form. Though the six (later, seven) metallic beings would later evolve and grow under Kanigher's stewardship, their distinct personalities and clever modus operandi were fully formed from their first panels. There was the noble Gold, the sluggish Iron, the dense Lead, the mercurial Mercury, the fragile Tin, and, best of all, the passionate Platinum, aka Tina.

The sextet was possessed of great power and no great facility in wielding it. Sent on a mission, they had an extra motivation to succeed: to prove they were worthy of continued existence and should not be melted for scrap. I don't know about you but I feel that way every time I start a new project.

DC's super-hero comics of the day were not overflowing with characterization. What their heroes did was ever so much more important than who they were or how they felt: Batman might be stymied by The Joker for much of a story, but that story was all about how he'd finally catch said Joker, not at all about what emotions the Caped Crusader might experience in the process. (There were DC comics with human insight, of course — Kanigher's war stories had plenty — but no one had then thought to put much of that into a super-hero series. Not until Marvel started to outsell them, at least.)

Metal Men was an early exception. As I think back about the concurrent Justice League of America comic, I recall clever plots. As I think back about Metal Men, I recall wonderful, human moments. And isn't it interesting that, throughout comics history, some of the most human moments have come from the characters who were the least human?

For the art, Kanigher went to two regulars in his comics, the team of Ross Andru and Mike Esposito. This was perfect casting. Andru's work always walked that fine line 'twixt seriousness and humor; at times, in his grimmer assignments, you could see slim traces of raillery around the edges, as though he was itching to burst forth with something a notch more "cartoony." With Metal Men, he finally did. He invested each character with the same distinctive personality that Kanigher was writing into the balloons and he made their absurd action scenes credible. (Doc Magnus' charges, though robots, would often stretch themselves in ways that would have caused Plastic Man to pull a groin muscle. Somehow, with Andru drawing it, you never paused to wonder how.)

The one time I got to meet and talk with Andru, he vividly recalled that first Metal Men assignment. It had, of course, an impossible deadline, and — unlike his writer-editor Kanigher — Andru was not a speed demon. His work, though often simple in form and line, was laboriously conceived. He couldn't, like some of our greats, sit down and bat out pages by instinct. He had to think through every panel, envisioning it from every possible angle, before putting pencil to paper.

What made it possible for him to get Showcase #37 drawn on time was his affection for the material and his realization that, after years of drawing comics for which he was not ideally suited, he'd finally found the proper match of man and material. This is not an exact quote — no tape was running when we spoke — but he said, approximately: "Bob gave me this script and I read it and I loved it. I couldn't wait to get to the board. Then he told me the deadline and I knew there was no way I could make it. But I also knew that, if I could get it done and if this strip could become a regular series, it was a series I'd love drawing. So somehow, so they wouldn't give it to someone else, I got the first one done in a week. I never did one that fast after that."

I bought the four Showcase issues of Metal Men off the stands and enjoyed them tremendously. One — about an empty shell named Chemo that came to life when filled with discarded chemicals — was a special classic. I was disappointed when Showcase #41 came out containing not Metal Men but Tommy Tomorrow.

The disappointment did not last long. Within months, DC house ads were announcing Metal Men #1. But of course.

We could fill many an issue of Comics Buyer's Guide recounting the comic-book work of Robert Kanigher, but this'll have to do for now. I think it's terrific that the San Diego con has made him a guest this year and I congratulate whoever suggested it.

I'm told that several other fine writers are on the hoped-for list for '98 — folks who cobbled up some of our favorite comics over the years but have somehow never made it to San Diego to be honored for their body of work. I think that's great and can name a dozen worthy honorees — but no one who's written as many fine stories as Robert Kanigher. There ain't no such animal.

"Share a Smile Becky," the newest member of the Barbie doll empire, has a problem. As I reported a few weeks ago, Becky is a strawberry blond in a hot-pink wheelchair. Mattel was justifiably proud of its new doll and had every right to be.

Becky, the toy company hoped, would change attitudes about people with disabilities. Advocates for the disabled welcomed her, and youngsters who use wheelchairs loved her. "So," you ask, "what's the problem?"

It's this thing called the 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act, which requires accessible entrances for wheelchairs. Becky's wheelchair doesn't fit through the doors of Barbie's dream house.

You wouldn't think an intelligent woman like Barbie, who has been both a nurse and a doctor, not to mention an astronaut, a teacher, and a presidential candidate, would make such a mistake, but she did. Better dig out that law degree, Babs.

Actually, in a surprising exhibition of rationality for this in-your-face and litigious society, no one is getting worked up about this. Mattel has already announced that it will redesign the houses in the future to accommodate Becky. Advocates of and people with disabilities are finding humor in the situation.

"How ironic and true ... housing for people with disabilities that is not accessible," said college student Priscilla Wong, and, in response to Mattel's announcement, added, "now if it were that easy for the rest of us."

"This is what we live with every day," said Johnson, who has cerebral palsy, but she called Mattel's goof hilarious.

Gosh, rational people finding simple solutions to problems and doing so in a congenial and supportive manner: You don't suppose there's any chance this could catch on, do you?

Barbie herself dropped by my office for a visit, and we spent a pleasant afternoon going through some of the girl-friendly comics I've received lately. Although it was a bit disconcerting to deal with her changing her outfit every 15 minutes, we did find a number of cool titles to share with you.

☞ Amanda and Gunn #1 (Image, $2.95) is a four-issue mini-series by Jimmie Robinson. It features characters introduced in his self-published Cyberzone, catching up with them up some five years after their adventures in that excellent title.

Amanda, once a "super-hero" in her near-future America, has moved to the country to make a simpler life. But the small, Twin Peaks-esque town she now calls home isn't safe from the terrors of the big city, and Amanda finds herself its only chance against the blood-chilling menace that walks among them.

Gunn? He's Amanda's sentient gun. He's also not too thrilled with being turned off for the past five years.

Robinson is a terrific storyteller with a sure command of his talent. On a Barbie scale of one to five, we give Amanda and Gunn two pairs of shoes with matching bags.

☞ Dean Hsieh's Athena (A.M. Works, $2.95) is the goddess of war and craft, favorite daughter of Zeus, and his right-hand woman. The handy "the story so far" box on the inside front cover reveals, "The main story of Athena usually takes place in the bizarro-futuristic city-state of Pan Athens in 2047 A.D. The new gods, known as The Merikites, are firing their ancient predecessors from godhood, 'retiring' them to the human world." The box changes from issue to issue, always giving the reader enough information to enjoy the current story.

Hsieh's manga influence was obvious from the moment we flipped through Athena #7 and #8, but it's not an overpowering influence. His characters are more fully realized than in most manga and his stories have more meat to them. What he uses most successfully from the influence is manga's ability to portray action and emotion silently when the circumstances of a story demand it.

Athena got involved with its cast quickly. Issue #7's "I Gotta Right to Sing the Blues" was an especially moving tale and left us wanting to read the entire run of the title. On the Barbie scale, we have to give Athena two pairs of shoes, a matching handbag, and a charm bracelet.

☞ The Barbie sports car and wardrobe go to Linda Medley's Castle Waiting #1 and #2 (Olio, $2.95 each). Medley picked up an Eisner Awards nomination for Castle Waiting: The Curse of Brambly Hedge ($5.95), but it was these issues that really won us over.

Lady Jain has emerged as one of the most courageous heroines in comics. She is not a warrior, but her bravery is as undeniable as her charm, kindness, and wit. I'm very much looking forward to sharing this series with my daughter Kelly.

Medley's storytelling has improved greatly since her original Castle graphic novel. It has a sureness of line and word that I thought was somewhat lacking in the first book. Now, of course, I can't wait for the next issue. This is a great series.

☞ Neither Barbie and I were quite sure whether we should praise this next one or, instead, warn girls everywhere of its existence.

Rich Koslowski's How to Pick up Girls if You're a Comic Book Geek (3 Finger Prints, $3.95) is the hilarious story of one such geek's quest to seek out romance in the real world. As we read it, we laughed, we howled, we feared it would unleash thousands of wannabe Don Juans in Spidey underwear on a nation of unsuspecting females. The only way we can see to prevent this from happening is if all of you non-geek comic-book readers buy every copy you see and thus keep this dangerous handbook out of the hands of the romantically challenged. Think of your sisters.

Barbie is getting dressed for her dinner date with Ken, which means that all I have to do is nod approvingly at each prospective outfit and say, "That looks keen." I've been married long enough to know my actual opinion is not necessary.

While we're waiting for Barbie's lucky guy, let's zip through some mini-reviews of other comics.

☞ Archie and Friends #24 (Archie, $1.50) features the return of two characters we haven't seen in too long a time: Cricket O'Dell, who can sniff out money anywhere, and the dashing Frankie Valdez. I miss these kids and was delighted to see them in "Cricket's Good Scents" by Dan Parent, Stan Goldberg, and Mike Esposito. I hope we see more of them in the months to come.

☞ Elfquest #11 and #12 (Warp Graphics, $4.95 each) are two more reasons why this title is one of the best reading bargains in the comics industry. The contributors to this 64-page monthly include Wendy Pini, Richard Pini, Barry Blair, and Brandon McKinney. Elfquest has fantasy, it has personality, and it has heart. I love this comic book.

☞ The second issue of Janet Hetherington's Eternal Romance (Best Destiny, $2.50) will be out soon. We're talking three fun stories of love among the weird. "The Mummy's Boy" was my favorite, but all of them were good. Check it out.

☞ Tara Jenkins used to publish cool mini-comics under the title Galaxion. Now those mini-comics have grown into a full-sized comic book also called Galaxion (Helikon, $2.75), a character-driven science-fiction series. Jenkins is still new at this, but, as this first issue shows, she's getting better with every effort.

She's definitely a talent to watch.

☞ B.C. Boyer has managed to make his Hilly Rose (Astro Comics, $2.95) funny and heart-breaking at the same time, a masterful blend of comedy and tragedy. Each issue has a helpful "what has happened so far" page to bring new readers up to date on the science-fiction adventures of investigative reporter Hilly Rose, and each issue brings the kind of new surprises that keep readers coming back for more. You should be one of them.

☞ Inu-Yasha (Viz, $2.95) is the newest series from the legendary Rumiko Takahashi, creator of such classics as Lum, Maison Ikkoku, and Ranma ½. Billed as "A Feudal Fairy Tale," Inu-Yasha is a mix of comedy, fantasy, horror, and maybe even romance. Takahashi has said in interviews that she's still not sure exactly what kind of series this is, but that's not a big concern for either her or me right now. In my case, I'm just enjoying a wild ride with a master storyteller at the wheel. Come aboard and have some fun.

That brings us to the end of this week's column. Barbie just left with Ken. She looked as spectacular as always, but she left me with 50 or 60 matching outfits and "accessories" scattered throughout the house. I'm telling you, Barbie's next new friend had better be a maid.

See you next week.

Tony Isabella tried to get in touch with his feminine side, but she slapped his face and then sued him for harassment. If you want to send the poor guy letters of support, letters of comment, or anything else that you can stick a stamp on and which won't smell funny if it sits around the post office for a couple days, the address is: Tony's Tips, P.O. Box 1502, Medina, OH 44258. Have a happy and safe summer.

As we read it, we laughed, we howled, we feared it would unleash thousands of wannabe Don Juans in Spidey underwear on a nation of unsuspecting females. The only way we can see to prevent this from happening is if all of you non-geek comic-book readers buy every copy you see and thus keep this dangerous handbook out of the hands of the romantically challenged. Think of your sisters.

Barbie is getting dressed for her dinner date with Ken, which means that all I have to do is nod approvingly at each prospective outfit and say, "That looks keen." I've been married long enough to know my actual opinion is not necessary.

While we're waiting for Barbie's lucky guy, let's zip through some mini-reviews of other comics.

☞ Archie and Friends #24 (Archie, $1.50) features the return of two characters we haven't seen in too long a time: Cricket O'Dell, who can sniff out money anywhere, and the dashing Frankie Valdez. I miss these kids and was delighted to see them in "Cricket's Good Scents" by Dan Parent, Stan Goldberg, and Mike Esposito. I hope we see more of them in the months to come.

☞ Elfquest #11 and #12 (Warp Graphics, $4.95 each) are two more reasons why this title is one of the best reading bargains in the comics industry. The contributors to this 64-page monthly include Wendy Pini, Richard Pini, Barry Blair, and Brandon McKinney. Elfquest has fantasy, it has personality, and it has heart. I love this comic book.

☞ The second issue of Janet Hetherington's Eternal Romance (Best Destiny, $2.50) will be out soon. We're talking three fun stories of love among the weird. "The Mummy's Boy" was my favorite, but all of them were good. Check it out.

☞ Tara Jenkins used to publish cool mini-comics under the title Galaxion. Now those mini-comics have grown into a full-sized comic book also called Galaxion (Helikon, $2.75), a character-driven science-fiction series. Jenkins is still new at this, but, as this first issue shows, she's getting better with every effort.

She's definitely a talent to watch.

☞ B.C. Boyer has managed to make his Hilly Rose (Astro Comics, $2.95) funny and heart-breaking at the same time, a masterful blend of comedy and tragedy. Each issue has a helpful "what has happened so far" page to bring new readers up to date on the science-fiction adventures of investigative reporter Hilly Rose, and each issue brings the kind of new surprises that keep readers coming back for more. You should be one of them.

☞ Inu-Yasha (Viz, $2.95) is the newest series from the legendary Rumiko Takahashi, creator of such classics as Lum, Maison Ikkoku, and Ranma ½. Billed as "A Feudal Fairy Tale," Inu-Yasha is a mix of comedy, fantasy, horror, and maybe even romance. Takahashi has said in interviews that she's still not sure exactly what kind of series this is, but that's not a big concern for either her or me right now. In my case, I'm just enjoying a wild ride with a master storyteller at the wheel. Come aboard and have some fun.

That brings us to the end of this week's column. Barbie just left with Ken. She looked as spectacular as always, but she left me with 50 or 60 matching outfits and "accessories" scattered throughout the house. I'm telling you, Barbie's next new friend had better be a maid.

See you next week.

Tony Isabella tried to get in touch with his feminine side, but she slapped his face and then sued him for harassment. Commentary and analysis by John Jackson Miller

Kingdom Come, Astro City, and a lost friend of the industry were among those CBG readers honored as their favorites in the comics industry for 1996. In addition to feting Alex Ross's work with several awards, readers voted Marvel Editor Mark Gruenwald, who died last year, into a tie as their favorite editor. The awards were announced June 13 at Heroes Con in Charlotte, N.C., at a ceremony presided over by Master of Ceremonies Peter David.

For its 15th Annual Fan Awards, CBG began bringing the event back home, to you, the regular reader of CBG. We did considerably less proselytizing for votes in other venues than we have in past years, with external ballots appearing in only a few other places. (Even so, well over 1,000 eligible ballots were cast this year.) We'd been planning for some time to take a look at our readers' unfiltered preferences — as we did in the earliest years of the Awards, when only CBG readers were polled. If you remember patterns of voting in previous years, you may see some of the differences in CBG readers' tastes reflected in this year's polling. Next year, only CBG readers will be eligible to vote, with no duplication of ballots permitted, thus fully reestablishing the Awards as an honor bestowed on creators by the fan community's elite — you, the readers of CBG.

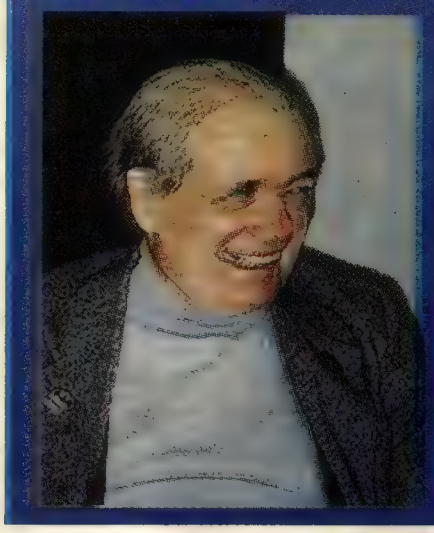
As usual, all were scrutinized and spot-checks were made to guarantee the integrity of the survey as an instrument for communicating the preferences of comics fans. And, as with all our surveys, we hasten to note that we received votes for almost every creator, title, and character imaginable this year, and almost every creator was somebody's favorite in 1996.

Favorite Editor: (tie) Denny O'Neil & Mark Gruenwald



Fans honored a lost friend by voting for Mark Gruenwald as one of their two favorite editors. Gruenwald, who died unexpectedly last year, had long been a fan favorite, winning this category in 1987. DC's Batman Line Editor Denny O'Neil tied Gruenwald for the honors, the fourth time he's won a share of the title. His previous wins were in 1986, 1988, and 1989.

Archie Goodwin advanced from sixth place last year to fourth place. Former winners Mike Carlin and Vertigo Line Editor Karen Berger rounded out the top five.

Three-time winner and last year's honoree Bob Harras placed sixth. DC's Paul Kupperberg and Acclaim's Fabian Nicieza were new to the list of editors receiving 10 votes or more this year.

Favorite Comic Book: 'Kurt Busiek's Astro City'

After the first Kurt Busiek's Astro City limited series placed second in this category in last year's awards, the ongoing series begun in 1996 was a shoo-in. Starman improved from third place to second. Cerebus placed higher than it has in years.

Last year's winner, Uncle Scrooge Adventures, came in 24th place.

DC had 14 titles with 10 or more votes, Image and Marvel had four, Gladstone had two, and Dark Horse had one. Last year, DC had 17 titles with 10 or more votes, Marvel had 10, Image seven, and Gladstone and Archie two.

Favorite Comic-Book Story: 'Kingdom Come'

The "Marvel vs. DC" storyline picked up some votes, though not enough to make the list of stories getting 10 votes or more. Some marked simply "Amalgam" for favorite story, although we were at a loss to figure out which of the 12 different stories they were referring to.

By publisher, DC had claim to seven stories receiving 10 or more votes, Image and Marvel had two, and Dark Horse had one. Last year, when ballot distribution was much wider, DC had 10, Image and Marvel had three, and Gladstone had two.

Favorite Writer: Mark Waid

Kingdom Come scribe Mark Waid became the third different writer in as many years to win this category, following a trio of three-peats by Alan Moore, Chris Claremont, and Neil Gaiman.

Kurt Busiek leapt from fourth place to second this year, and past winner Peter David came in third, closely followed by Starman scribe James Robinson. Garth Ennis rounded out the top five.

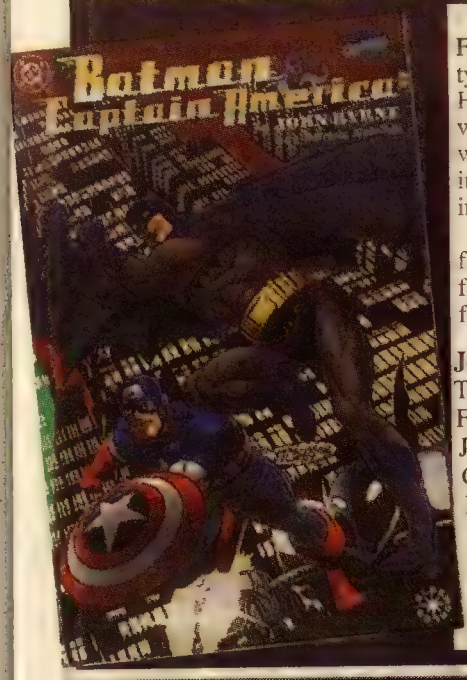
Favorite Penciller: John Byrne



He's still got it. John Byrne, who was last named Favorite Penciller back in 1986, proved his popularity with fans endures by winning a full decade later. He placed second last year. Last year's third-place winner, Tony Harris, improved to a second-place tie with Frank Miller, who was our first "Favorite Artist" in 1982 before the category split into pencillers and inkers. Byrne won that category in 1984.

Four-time winner Todd McFarlane's time away from pencilling is definitely reflected in his absence from these charts. He didn't place lower than third from 1986 to 1995.

Favorite Inker: Terry Austin

A fifth win in this category for Superman Adventures inker Terry Austin ties the record of fifth-place finisher Scott Williams. Williams won his five awards consecutively, while Austin won from 1986 to 1989.

Wade von Grawbadger improved from third last year to second, and Mark Farmer, who's been in the top five for six consecutive years, improved to third place. George Pérez leapt up the list to place fourth, and Ash inker Jimmy Palmiotti came in sixth.

Last year's winner, Pat Block, tied for 19th with John Byrne, who won top honors for his pencilling this year.

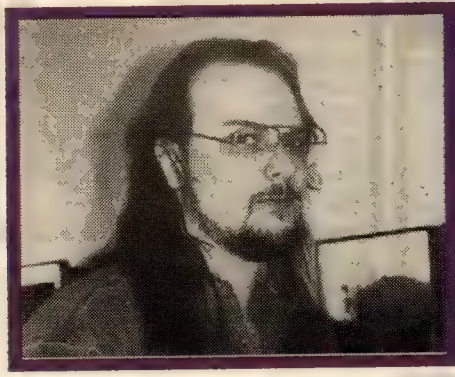
Favorite Painter: Alex Ross



What's better than taking first place by a factor of eight-to-one last year? How about 26 to one? Call the engraver and get him set up for next year, too: Kingdom Come and Astro City painter Alex Ross is fandom's fave with a brush, winning for the third year in a row and more times than anyone else in this category.

There aren't a lot of names in this category, for which only original painted work appearing for the first time in a comic book is eligible. For a pleasant change, we had very few wasted votes of the smart-aleck variety this time out (da Vinci, van Gogh, et al.). We take this as a good sign for the future of comics fandom.

Favorite Colorist: Gregory Wright

This was a close one, but Gregory Wright, who came in third last year, narrowly edged out last year's winner, Legion of Super-Heroes colorist and writer Tom McCraw. It's the second year in a row an individual rather than a studio has won, but the studios remain popular: Steve Oliff and his Olyoptics studio took third, after winning from 1992 to 1995; and Lovern Kindzierski and Digital Chameleon came in fourth.

Our usual caveat: The studios that handle coloring and lettering continue to affect our ability to tabulate votes. Individuals still receive just as many votes as the studios they're affiliated with — and, with the exception of a few, neither we nor the fans are always sure who's working with which studio at any moment. If any creator feels his or her votes should have gone to a particular studio, drop us a line for next year.

Favorite Original Graphic Novel/Album: 'Batman/Captain America'

John Byrne's 1940s team-up took the prize in this category. It's a DC stronghold, as the publisher has a claim to six of the seven works receiving 10 or more votes. Since this category was altered to exclude price guides in 1986, DC has published nine of the 11 winners.

Favorite Reprint Graphic Novel/Album: 'Astro City: Life in the Big City'

High-ranking limited series one year usually do well in the reprint album voting the next; such was the case with Kurt Busiek's Astro City: Life in the Big City, which placed fifth among mini-series last year and won in this category this year.

Last year's winner, The Carl Barks Library, placed eighth.

Favorite Limited Series: 'Kingdom Come'

No contest whatsoever for Kingdom Come, which topped last year's winner by a margin of 10 to one.

While Dark Horse had three of the top five, its tie last year with DC was broken, as DC had seven series receiving 10 votes or more. Marvel had a share of two series on the list, and Kitchen Sink and Image had one each. Last year, Dark Horse and DC each had seven, Marvel had six, and Image had two.

We included "Amalgam" with an asterisk, since it clearly wasn't a series but rather a dozen unrelated one-shots. If we'd had a category for "Favorite Event," it would surely be eligible — but we can only imagine the range of votes we'd get for such a category!

Favorite Cover Artist: Alex Ross

Fans again awarded top honors as Favorite Cover Artist to Alex for his painted covers on Kurt Busiek's Astro City and Kingdom Come. More than 100 more voters preferred Ross this year than last year.

Glenn Fabry placed second, up from fourth place last year, also increasing his vote count. The Power of Shazam! writer and artist Jerry Ordway, who leapt from 39th place to fourth in last year's balloting, improved his showing to third this year. Three-time winner Brian Bolland came in fourth. Tony Harris, new to the list in 1994, repeated last year's fifth-place performance.

George Pérez, who, like Bolland, also won this category three years in a row, received votes this year, as well.

Carl Barks was only eligible in this category this year, by virtue of his new comic-book work in 1996, the cover of Walt Disney Comics & Stories #601, cover-dated February 1996. Featuring line art which Barks traced from one of his paintings with Susan Daigle-Leach color based on Barks' color rough, it was the piece's first appearance as a comic-book cover, making Barks eligible for the category. He placed seventh.

Favorite Letterer: Richard Starkings & Comicraft

Slowly and steadily climbing this chart for years, Richard Starkings and his Comicraft studio took the honors this year. Studio-system computer colorists first won their category in 1992, but this is a first for the lettering category.

Second place winner Todd Klein has one first and six second place finishes in the past seven years. Four-time winner Tom Orzechowski again finished fourth. Cerebus letterer Dave Sim placed fifth, his best showing in years.

The era of Prohibition lives on in Caliber's 'Untouchables'

Caliber INDIES

By Phil Hester

Joe Pruett is the writer and co-creator of the upcoming Caliber Comics monthly series Untouchables, loosely based on the Eliot Ness group of government agents who rose to national prominence in the 1930s, mainly for their role in helping send Al Capone to prison. Pruett recently joined Caliber as its creative director.

CBG: How much of a relationship does the new Untouchables series have with the Untouchables concept we're familiar with?*

Pruett: A lot but not much. OK, I've got you confused now, right?

Most everyone is familiar with Eliot Ness and his band of Untouchables, be it from the movie, the TV shows, books, or whatever. So maybe everything in the Hollywood version of Ness isn't true (like the fact that the movie portrayed him as married and with kids — which he wasn't at the time and only had one child whom he adopted later in life — and with an aging Sean Connery as his elder mentor, when in fact there were nine members of The Untouchables and not one was married or over 30), the man's pretty much become a legend.

"So maybe everything in the Hollywood version of Ness isn't true ... the man's pretty much become a legend."
— Joe Pruett

The fact is that The Untouchables were created to help enforce the 18th Amendment (Prohibition). After Prohibition ended, Ness moved on to Cleveland where he eventually lost a bid for mayor and faded away from the public consciousness.

Now we ask the question: "What if Prohibition had never ended?" History would be changed, wouldn't it? Ness' life would have changed, right? Our story picks up about 20 years after Ness helped put Capone away. Ness himself, a national hero and public icon, has disappeared years ago. Was it murder or did he just decide it was time to fade from the public eye, you know, like Elvis? [Laughter] Anyway, no one knows for sure.

What we have now is a new squad of Untouchables, a new leader and a new enemy. Oh, and Prohibition, which in this time frame has proven to be very successful, has been broadened to include tobacco products, firearms, and other vices. And, just to make things interesting, gambling has been made legal in the city of Chicago to help offset the lost tax revenues from the now-illegal products. We'll have a Chicago that may rival Las Vegas with its neon lights and casinos. So, you see, we're taking the familiar aspects of The Untouchables, but adding a twist to it, an "Elseworlds" kind of take on it. Actually, I guess the closest comparison to it would be Guy Davis' Baker Street, where the Victorian Age never ended. But it wasn't a conscious attempt on our parts to mimic Baker Street in any regard, even though Gary Reed helped to develop both series. I think both series stand on their own in their originality and quality.

CBG: What sets this apart from your past work?*

Pruett: Although I'll be dealing with some true-to-life issues, Untouchables, for the most part, will be true fantasy. I won't have to read through mounds of research material to make sure I get facts right or details straight. This time I'll be able to just make it up as I go along and feel comfortable doing it.

When you write about history, it's important to know history. Although I'll still have to do some research into the characters such as Ness and the beginnings of The Untouchables, I pretty much get to just go wild.

CBG: What kind of look will the series have?*

Pruett: Well, when you've got Michael Wm. Kaluta doing the cover illustrations you've automatically got a well-recognized, unique style of art for the series, which is one of the things I searched for while looking for an interior artist. After considering a few potential pencillers, we settled on a relative newcomer to the industry, John Kissee. One thing I think John brings to Untouchables is a unique, personal style that truly captures the atmosphere and the mood of the series and the time era. I didn't want a flavor-of-the-month type artist and I think after seeing John's pencils you'll agree I didn't go that way. [Laughter] He's at the opposite end of the spectrum, as far as that's concerned. I mean that in a very positive way. John's a wonderful artist who I think is going to catch quite a few people off-guard with his talent and win over countless fans along the way. You'll be hearing a lot about this artist through the years and you can quote me on that.

CBG: What are your hopes for this series? What kind of reader do you want to reach?*

Pruett: I hope it rockets to the top of the sales chart and stays there for eight years, allowing me to retire and live off royalties for the rest of my life.

Seriously, I hope that it finds a receptive audience and a core following that would allow it to be published for as long as John and I— and, of course, Caliber — want to keep doing it, which I think could be for quite a while. It's a fun project, I work with some great guys, and I love the concept, so what else could I want?

As far as readers go, I just want to reach a reader who enjoys a well-done comic book. I'm not aiming at any one age group, since I think that this series will appeal to readers of all ages. There isn't any unnecessary violence, harsh language, or anything else that might put a parent off or get a store owner in trouble for selling an issue to a minor. It won't insult the intelligence of an adult or talk down to a 12-year-old. It's a universally fun series for all.

MEGA DEAL K-7
50 ASSORTED STAR TREK GENE RODDENBERRY SETS

Way back in the beginning Star Trek was struggling to get onto the airwaves. T.V. networks and stations could not understand the concept in words. Gene Roddenberry took to presenting pictures on mini-cards to the T.V. stations in his promotional mailings and thus created a unique 19 set 504 card collectible card set. Produced from about 1973-1987 or so, each set had only one very small printing (as Magill Barrett Roddenberry) states. The pictures were taken on the set by Gene himself, showing various phases of each production, including himself, costumes, creatures (some that made it and some that did not). Each set is 16 cards long and there are 19 sets total. Order yours today as we have a very limited supply and they can never be remade as the negatives do not exist anymore!

Retail at $9.95/set of 16

THE SPIRIT — THE INNER VOICE #14 — WILL EISNER

YOU SAY WE STOLE YOUR KEYS??
YEAH, WHAT KIND OF A KEY!
HEH, HEH, NOTHING! JUST A HOUSE KEY, HEH, HEH!
I HEARD A VOICE!
SAID TREASURE, HMM!
VOICE, HEH, WHAT VOICE? OH, SEEMPHONY... SEEMPHONY OF LOVE
SEEMPHONY OF LOVE HERE EES MY HEART
LISTEN! THAT VOICE AGAIN....
HE KNOWS OF A VAST TREASURE!
© 1991 WILL EISNER

Wolff & Byrd, Counselors of the Macabre — By Batton Lash

A WRONGLY ACCUSED VAMPIRE SEEKS REFUGE IN HIS OWN HOME, BUT THE CROWD OUTSIDE WANTS HIM AS THEIR LEAD FOR THE 11 O'CLOCK NEWS! CONSEQUENTLY, ONE OF THE VAMPIRE'S LAWYERS DECIDES TO CONFRONT THE MOB TO SATISFY THEIR THIRST...
GET AWAY FROM THE WINDOW, MR. LEACH- WE DON'T WANT THEM TO SEE YOU!
SORRY, MR. BYRD- BUT I JUST HAD TO SEE HOW YOUR PARTNER FIELDS QUESTIONS FROM THOSE BLOOD-SUCKERS!
...AND I'M CONFIDENT THAT THE HARASSMENT CHARGES WILL BE DROPPED ONCE MY CLIENT HAS HIS NIGHT IN COURT.
BACK THERE- DO YOU HAVE A QUESTION?
MS. WO-WO-WOLFF! WHAT'S SCARIER- THE V-V-V-VAMPIRE--
-OR YOUR HAIRSTYLE?
GROAN MY WORST NIGHTMARE- STUTTERING JOHN!

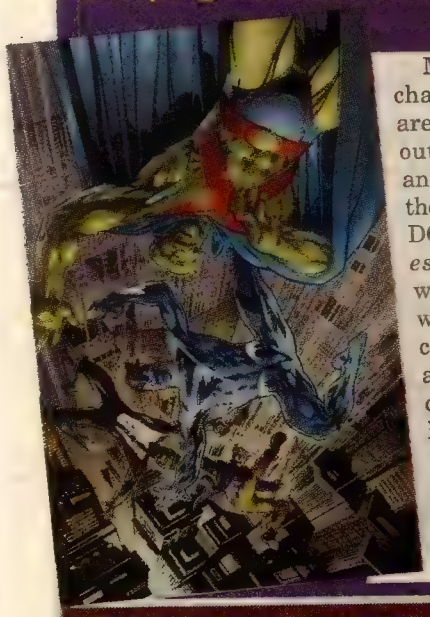
Publisher's Picks & Retailer Reviews

A number of publishers were recently asked to choose, from the material they have scheduled to ship in August, which titles they felt would be most worthy of the attention of readers and collectors. Participating retailers were then asked to predict how popular each title will be and to grade each preview from A+ to F, according to how successful they found it as a work of art or entertainment.

Genesis #1

DC, four weekly issues
32 pages, color, $1.95

DC's Scott Nybakken says: "Millennia ago, a wave of power emanated from The Source and expanded across the universe. Wherever the wave passed, it left in its wake the seeds for super-powered beings ranging from The New Gods to Green Lantern, from the gods of Olympus to Starman. But the wave has crested and is contracting across the cosmos. This time the wave's passage is undoing what it once wrought, and some of the most powerful heroes of the DC universe find their abilities stripped away — or altered in unexpected ways. With repercussions felt by virtually every character in the DC universe, the effects of Genesis will be evident long after the series' end, as some characters find their powers remain altered and others — including one of DC's greatest heroes — meet their deaths." The crossover mini-series is written by John Byrne and drawn by Ron Wagner.



Mateer: Almost all of the DC characters with super-powers are having their powers short out on them at odd intervals and the world's in turmoil. Is it the end? Nah, it's the summer DC crossover mini-series, Genesis. This first issue has a workmanlike script by Byrne, who's good at juggling large casts of characters, and OK art by Wagner (again, facing a difficult assignment, since he has to draw close to 200 separate characters). The problem is, it's just another summer crossover. Gosh, what'll happen? A prediction: Some minor characters will die, some major characters will undergo minor changes, and a few new titles will be launched. Also, DC will make sure that practically every character ties into the storyline somehow, so completists will have to buy everyone's series. (Even the Young Heroes in Love appear in this first issue. I'm betting on Major Bummer and Resurrection Man by the second one.) Yawn. Frankly, the whole concept is old hat by now. Skim this in the bookstore, just in case something important happens, but buy it only if you must. Grade: C.

Lawton: A pretty nifty super-hero story from Byrne featuring some characters that I love — The Justice League — and some characters I really couldn't care less about — The New Gods. Byrne keeps the story moving along nicely, and penciller Wagner's art is kinetic without being busy. You could do worse. Incidentally, I still haven't weighed in on the subject of Superman's new costume — Grade: B+.

Biggers: In this series, Byrne reveals the source of super-powers in the DC universe by eliminating, altering, and/or enhancing the powers of some of its best-known heroes and villains.

At this point, I don't know if any permanent changes are going to come from this series, but the first issue builds well, leaving me eager to see what happens next. Wagner's art looks a bit different here than it has in his recent work for Marvel; the finished product is reminiscent at times of Don Heck, a very under-appreciated veteran illustrator of the Silver Age. Grade: A-.

Retailers' grade: B

Sinthia #1

Lightning Comics
color, $3

Lightning's Steven Zyskowski says: "Sinthia, the 18-year-old daughter of Lucifer, couldn't stand living in Hell any more. She stole a piece of her father's dark crystal and used it to spy on humans, fantasizing about leaving Hell to experience the most 'forbidden' of demon emotions — love. Sinthia and her guardian demon, Mhor-Duke, defiantly leave Hell together so Sinthia may begin her quest for true love on Earth." Lightning describes the title as free of adult content and recommends it for all ages. Platinum and signed editions are available for $9.95.

"She's the daughter of Satan, but at heart she just wants to be a valley girl, and Hell is, like, just too grody for words."
— Phil Mateer

Mateer: Pity poor Sinthia: She's the daughter of Satan, but at heart she just wants to be a valley girl, and Hell is, like, just too grody for words. (Daddy says, "How dare you take that tone with me! I am Lord Lucifer! You exist because I willed it!" Sinthia replies, "Oh, please! Like I should be in your debt or something! I never asked to be your daughter! I never asked to live in hell!" Kids today, y'know?)

This might have potential if it were played for laughs, but Lightning Comics is pretty much dead serious here, with two covers, an alternate $10 platinum edition that's "limited" (snicker) to 5000 copies, and an action figure, too. This may have worked three years ago, but (and maybe I'm over-estimating the taste of the market here) I think the "Bad Girl" craze has passed and I don't think Sinthia is going to get very far. Grade: C-.

Lawton: This tale of Satan's valley-girl daughter — a sublimely silly hybrid of the worst Spawn knock-off and a particularly hormone-fueled edition of Young Romance — is so compellingly ridiculous that I had to read it three times to ascertain if writer Joseph Adam is yanking our collective chains or not. Having failed to do so, I am forced to give it a B just for keeping me in stitches. On second thought, no, I'm not. Grade: C.

Biggers: Sinthia is another "Bad Girl" comic book. This time, the Bad Girl is the ultimate Bad Girl, the daughter of Lucifer himself. It's a very polished "Bad Girl" series, but this is a genre that has lost most of its luster, as far as I'm concerned. I can, however, still appreciate the fact that Joseph Adam and Rod Perry have produced a comic book that rises above the level of most other comics of this sort. I'm not a "Bad Girl" comics fan, and the story held my interest until the end — that's definitely something in its favor. Grade: B+.

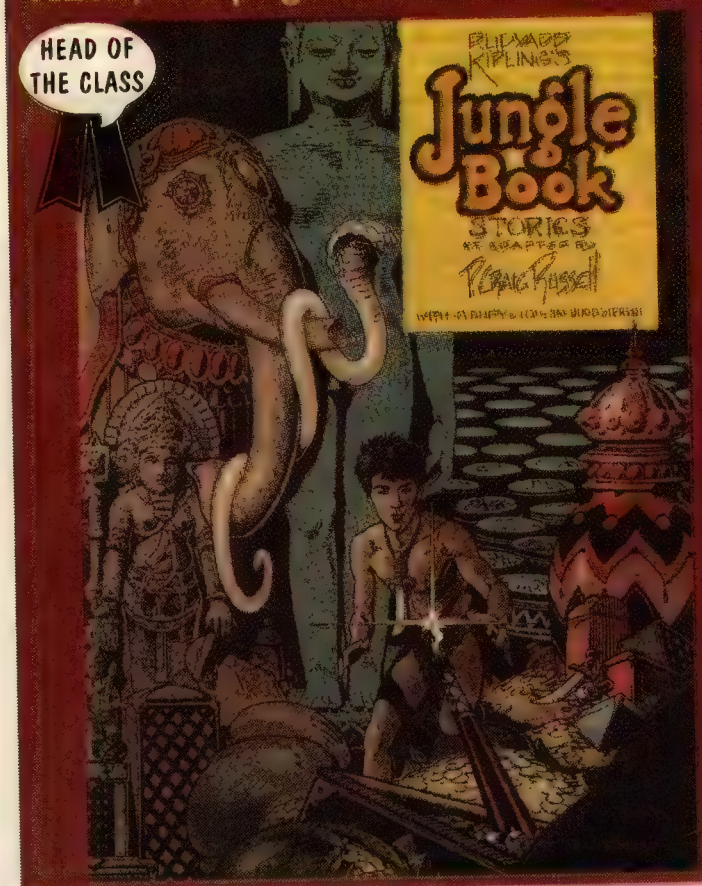
Jungle Book Stories

NBM, 88 pages, color, TPB, $16.95



NBM's Terry Nantier says: "P. Craig Russell's adaptation of stories from Kipling's Jungle Book are at long last available in one beautiful, large, color trade paperback with flaps. This collection consists of 'The King's Ankus' and 'Red Dog,' both published initially by Eclipse and now reshot in larger format with added pages — plus the new adaptation of 'The Spring Running,' which was previously serialized in black and white in NBM's ComicsLit magazine." The book includes an introduction by Jo Duffy.

Mateer: Russell has excellent taste: he's adapted Michael Moorcock, Oscar Wilde, various operas — and Rudyard Kipling. Two of these Jungle Book stories were published by Eclipse some time ago, and NBM is reprinting them with new material, plus a third story. Russell shows up twice in these retailer reviews this month (Marvel made his Doctor Strange one-shot its pick hit, too), and it couldn't happen to a better creator — his jungle is eerie, finely crafted, ancient, beautiful, and deadly. It's a perfect companion to Kipling's words and plot. NBM has put together a quality package here, one that treats the story and art with respect — this would be a good coffee-table book, one of those comics to show to people who say they don't read comics. Grade: A.

Biggers: This is as pretty to look at as anything Russell has done, and the adaptations do justice to Kipling's wonderful fantasies. If you think you've seen all this material before, think again: not only has Russell added some pages to the book, but there's one story in here that's never before been seen in color. Grade: A-.

Lawton: Another of NBM's fine series of smart literature reissues, Russell's adaptation of Kipling's stories occasionally suffers from the original's tendency toward overblown or circuitous verbosity. Kids, especially those raised on Disney's film, may have a hard time getting through this. Kids and adults who enjoy the act of reading will find this well worth their while. An added bonus is Russell's beautiful and evocative art. Grade: A-.

Ginsberg: P. Craig Russell fans will be delighted with this collection of Kipling's Jungle Book stories. Russell's inimitable art style is a perfect vehicle for conveying the mysterious and magical wonder of Kipling's jungle.

Accompanied by companion Kaa, the rock python, Mowgli sets off to find a legendary white-hooded cobra, guardian of wondrous secrets and sights in "The King's Ankus." Servant to the Brahmins — those of the ruling class — the aged snake regales Mowgli and Kaa with the story behind the treasure of kings. It is a treasure, indeed, anytime that Russell lends his talent to a project.

Bennett: It's weird how the Zeitgeist works. For decades you couldn't give a lord of the jungle away, and now we're hip-deep in them. Tarzan, Ka-Zar, and even George are all fine, but, if there can only be one, it has to be the original: Mowgli. Russell adapts the Jungle Book stories in an exuberant fashion that's simultaneously robust and refined, beautifully capturing the rich, deep pleasures to be found in Kiplings prose. Grade: A.

Retailers' grade: A

Untouchables #1

Caliber Comics

32 pages, black-and-white, $2.95

"A facinating speculative fantasy set in a world in which prohibition never ended."
— Cliff Biggers

Caliber's James Pruett says: "Crime, like prohibition, has not gone away. Corruption runs rampant through the Chicago police force, and a new generation of mobsters have taken control of the city. Prohibition now includes not only liquor, but tobacco and firearms. In this new puritan era, gambling seems to be the only vice allowed by law, so casinsos have sprouted up around the city — rivaling the neon glory of Las Vegas. Twenty years after the fall of Al Capone and the rise to fame of Eliot Ness comes a new group of Treasury agents code-named Untouchables. Led by Ness-like commanding officer Joe Tarpley, this bunch of misfits and sharpshooters are out to take their city back." This ongoing series is written by Joe Pruett and drawn by John Kissee. Michael Kaluta will supply covers.

Ginsberg: It is 10 years after its formation, and our story begins with a brief history of the not-so-untouchable Untouchables and the arrest and conviction of Ness' right-hand man, the corrupted Paul "Gus" Jenkins. In a slightly altered universe, the newly reformed Untouchables are given a mandate to patrol a gambling empire but, this time, with no pretense of untouchability.

But where in all this corruption, writer Joe Pruett asks, is Ness? Crime is up, morale is down, and Agent Joseph Tarpley gives us a glimpse into the price paid by a stalwart civil servant, when Tarpley comes home to an empty house filled with the voices and images of an absent family and, in a forlorn gesture, reaches for his consoling saxophone.

This is an interesting concept and story, peppered with the machine-gun staccato of gangsterese, albeit too heavily inked for my taste — I would have preferred a more pulpish or noir-ish feel to the artwork. I still give this a B- for an entertaining twist with some historical perspective.

Mateer: Here's a high-concept peg for a series, though Chicago being a mass of corruption and dirty politics in the 1940s is admittedly not much of a stretch. Most of the first issue is set-up and introduction of characters and background, with effective gangsters-and-gats black-and-white art by John Kissee and some nice narrative touches by writer Joe Pruett.

A few things bother me. For one, there's a scene where a bad guy walks up to two men, puts his hand in his overcoat, and comes out with a tommy gun practically bigger than he is (where exactly was it? — that's some roomy overcoat there). For another, there's a cynical drunk introduced at the end of the first issue who practically has the initials "EN" tattooed on his forehead — let's hope he's a red herring and not actually the Obvious Plot Device he seems to be. Overall, this isn't bad for a first issue. As with a lot of Caliber comics, we'll just have to wait and see if the potential pays off. Grade: B-.

Lawton: Pretty good idea haphazardly executed. Frankly, I don't like the idea of updating The Untouchables to modern times. Part of the charm of the original series — and the movie, for that matter — was the look and patois of the setting and characters. Though Pruett and Kissee do a fair job of retaining some of the look of 1920s Chicago, the occasional glimpse of a sleek, modern skyscraper and the odd reference to "computer geeks" seem unnecessary. The writing is strictly by the numbers, though there is a fine sequence where Ness standin Joe Tarpley imagines the evening ritual of his departed family. Finally, this may be an intentional alteration, but the 18th Amendment, prohibiting the sale, possession, or use of alcohol, was called, at least in our world, the Volstead Act, not the "Falstad" Act. Grade: B.

Biggers: Untouchables takes a popular law-enforcement drama and transforms it into something more: a fascinating speculative fantasy set in a world in which prohibition never ended. Pruett's story is fascinating in both its concept and its execution; John Kissee and Chris Dreier's art sometimes seems a little too stylized to do the story justice, but the series is entertaining reading, nevertheless — and just wait until you see the stunning cover by Michael Kaluta! Grade: B+.

Dr. Strange: What Is It That Disturbs You, Stephen

Marvel Comics, 48 pages, color, $5.99

Dr. Strange battles the mad sorceress Electra for the fate of the city of Ditkopolis in this P. Craig Russell story originally printed in truncated form in Doctor Strange Annual #1. This expanded version has been rewritten and redrawn by Russell.

Biggers: Doctor Strange: What Is It That Disturbs You, Stephen? is a delightful, magical quest and a piece of comics history at the same time. P. Craig Russell originally told this story in a Dr. Strange Annual years ago. Unhappy with the abbreviated length and the limitations of reproduction at that time, Russell has redone it in an expanded edition, transforming an entertaining story into one of the finest Doctor Strange tales ever told. I've gone through the comic book three times already, and I continue to find little touches that amuse, amaze, and captivate me. Grade: A.

Mateer: Russell's work has been showing up quite a bit lately — in the Elric series for Dark Horse, and in the Jungle Book reprints that are reviewed in this very issue of CBG — and it's always welcome; only Barry Smith can match his ability to create richly detailed but ethereal alternate worlds, glistening with magic and danger. This, of course, makes him perfect for Doctor Strange, and this 48-page one-shot demonstrates his strengths perfectly. Russell even pays sly tribute to an artistic predecessor — the lost city that Doc encounters is named Ditkopolis, and a card that starts the plot rolling has, at the bottom, the figures 7-63-7-66 (the dates during which Steve Ditko was drawing Strange's adventures). This is work by a mature creator at the peak of his talent — so buy it, already. Grade: A.

Bennett: Comics are supposed to be rich in mystery, adventure, fear, and fantasy, but all too often, the results are mundane and morose. As always, Russell has to be applauded for his technical triumphs in art and story, but more importantly, he's reached back and mined the key component of a great Doctor Strange story: wonder. Not slobbering Old Ones from beyond time or psychedelic vistas, but the sheer, simple magic of exploring unknown lands, unraveling riddles, and rescuing accursed maidens. Let other creators follow his example. Grade: A.

Ghost World hardcover

Fantagraphics, 80 pages, 2-color, $19.95

Fantagraphics' Eric Reynolds: "Soon to be a motion picture directed by Terry Zwigoff from a screenplay by Zwigoff and Daniel Clowes, Ghost World is poised to break through to the mainstream and garner respect and attention to our medium in a way that hasn't been seen since Zwigoff's Crumb documentary or Art Spiegelman's Maus."

Bennett: Even with a cartoonist with the remarkable range of Daniel Clowes, it's still startling to read Ghost World in one sitting. Haunting and evocative, full of sly details and sudden shifts, there's a simple, eloquent, indisputably authentic quality to his story of two girls growing up and apart. In literature, they call it 'felt life,' and, though there's a plethora of autobiographical comics, no others have come close to what Clowes achieves in Ghost World. Grade: A.

Lawton: This is a highly textured story of two young women, their friendship, and its eventual dissolution. Though Enid and Becky occasionally come across as abrasive and sometimes unthinking, as they dis everyone and everything around them, their affection for each other and their desire for some affection from the world around them is clear and is a testament to Clowes' skill as a writer. People like Enid and Becky walk into Newbury Comics every day, and Clowes has created an almost photographic representation of them. His ability to reproduce their thoughts and turmoils is uncanny. Highly recommended. Grade: A+.

Biggers: Ghost World is a fascinating character-driven story about believable people coping with life's problems as best they can; it's the sort of drama that Clowes excels at, and this is quite possibly the best work of his career. This is a perfect book for those who are looking for comic books about people, not costumes. Grade: A.

Ginsberg: Any story that starts off by trashing the pretentious publication Sassy has my immediate attention. Ghost World is character-driven, exploring themes of relationships, separation anxiety, individuality, self-esteem, and self-hatred — in other words, all the things that make up life. Grade: A for angst.

Mateer: Two things up front about this comic book: It's really, really good, and it's really, really depressing. (Fans of Dan Clowes shouldn't be surprised at either of these impressions.) Becky and Enid are best friends, just out of high school and staring the rest of their lives in the face, and they have no idea what to do. Enid, especially, is tragically hip, too hip for the small town they're stuck in, but can't come up with a plan that could get them out. At the same time, they're changing, drifting apart, caught between memories of childhood and fears of being grown-ups. Since Clowes is aiming at realism here, nothing really "happens," but this is a haunting and compelling story, one that will stay with you for days. Grade: A.

Sin City: Family Values

Dark Horse, 128 pages, black and white, TPB, $10

Dark Horse's Lou Bank: "Miho on roller-blades. Dwight on adrenaline. And the Sin City mob on clean-up detail. It's all here in Frank Miller's biggest graphic novel ever. If you've never visited the town without pity, it's time to book your travel plans." This is new material, not a collection.

Bennett: I realize this might be a tough sell for some retailers and readers, but Frank Miller knows what he's doing; this one has to be taken all at once. Oh, there are places where you could have broken it down into chunks, but you would've lost the manic pace of Miller's homicidal ballet. Family Values is a relentless blood-soaked roller coaster that's jumped its tracks, with deadly little Miho (a splash of white light in the pools of india ink, she always holds your eye and keeps it) in the front seat, standing up all the way. Grade: A.

Mateer: Dwight, the tough guy! Miho, the invincible (but petite) assassin! A '53 Cadillac! Corrupt politicians and mob paisanos! An exploding stray dog! More guns and blood than you can shake a nickel-plated .45 automatic at! Miller's average work is better than 90% of the competition, and this is better than average — at $10, it's the bargain of the month. Grade: A.

Biggers: This is the way Sin City stories should be presented. Sin City: Family Values offers readers the opportunity to enjoy this Sin City tale at one time, without having to wait four weeks between issues. This expanded format is perfectly suited for Miller's stark noir dramas: His graphic style carries the reader along at such a brisk pace that a standard 32-page comic book is over far too quickly. Kudos to Dark Horse for going straight to trade paper with this brutal story. Grade: A+.

Ginsberg: This seems to be a story about Bruno and his early days as "a low-rent killer" and, later, as a politico — a natural progression. All is not as black-and-white as the art that graces these pages. I can't say too much more, but suffice it to say this is a story filled with the twists and turns that often accompany a Sin City tale. Grade: B-.

Lawton: A tense mix of dark humor and dead serious revenge, SC:FV finds Miller incorporating strands of manga mysticism into his usual kettle of ultra-realism. Miller the writer is, as usual, dead on and Miller the artist keeps the violence relatively tasteful. Fine work. Grade: A.

Archie Americana Series: Best of the Forties

Archie Comics, 128 pages, color, TPB $10.95

Archie's Paul Castiglia: "When we kicked off our series of classic Archie reprints back in 1991, the demand was unprecedented. Whether you're a new fan seeking background on these legendary characters or a longtime fan who wants to revisit some classic moments, this book is for you." The collection includes work by Bob Montana, Vic Bloom, Harry Shorten, Bill Vigoda, and others.

"Archie is the quintessential idealized American teen-age experience" – Cliff Biggers

Archie in no Body's Dummy
YOU ALWAYS SAY YOU'D DIE FOR MY SAKE, BUT YOU NEVER DO!
BUT YOU WANT ME TO BE A--PIN CUSHION IN SEWING CLASS...WHAT DO YOU THINK I AM, A DUMMY? (DON'T ANSWER THAT!)

Lawton: Reading this compendium of the earliest Archie stories, one might be forced to ask the following questions: Who is this impostor who looks more like Alfred E. Neuman than the all-American Archie Andrews? When and why did Archie stop insisting on being referred to as "Chick?" (Well, never mind the "why.") Finally, did Archie Comics ever get any better than these, a great mix of the artistic and the anarchic? Though still a slice of whitebread Americana, these early stories have a flair and a sense of mischief that make ensuing tales of Riverdale seem bland by comparison. Grade: A-.

Mateer: Archie comics have been continually published since the early '40s, and only DC's big three comics characters (Superman, Batman, Wonder Woman) can match that claim. This trade paperback collecting some of the Riverdale gang's earliest adventures is a second printing, so most collectors who care about Archie comics are likely to have it already — but, if you don't, it's worthwhile.

Looking at Archie stories from the '40s is like stepping into a time machine: small-town America, with cops walking a beat, old jalopies, picket fences, malt shops, and, at one point, extravagantly priced orchestra seats for the theater for which Archie has to pay a whopping $4.40 each. (See, Arch has promised both Betty and Veronica a date, so he tries to take them both at once, and — well, some plots haven't changed much in 50 years, have they?) Seeing the earliest versions of these characters and how they quickly settled into their familiar selves is almost worth the price by itself. Grade: B.

Bennett: It's a lot of fun seeing the classic Archie characters develop in stories full of crude art and humor — and a startling amount of "Good Girl" art. Archie Comics deserves a lot of credit for publishing these Golden Age stories, as they reflect the less-than-politically-correct attitudes of the then popular culture — and this collection would make a great gift for any of your older relatives. (Speaking of which, are we ever going to see Archie's grandfather again?) Grade: A.

Biggers: For many Americans, the comic-book field is summed up by Superman, Batman, Spider-Man, and Archie. Archie is the quintessential idealized American teen-age experience, distilled and simplified. For younger readers, it's everything that they hope their teen-age years will be.

The amazing aspect of this collection is that the stories haven't really changed that significantly over the decades. While most 1940s super-hero fare seems crude and unpolished to today's readers, Archie has a timelessness that makes these stories just as enjoyable to today's readers as they were to their grandparents. Grade: A.

WildC.A.T.S/X-Men: The Modern Age

Image Comics, 48 pages, color, $4.50

WildStorms Jeff Mariotte: This is the third in Wildstorm's series of fun crossovers between the WildC.A.T.S and the X-Men. WildC.A.T.S X-Men: The Modern Age features a script by James Robinson and art by Adam Hughes and Mark Farmer."

Biggers: WildC.A.T.S/X-Men #3 isn't really the third issue in the series, per se; instead, it's the third stand-alone tale focusing on various meetings of these two superteams (or significant members thereof) at different times. This issue stars the classic X-Men team of the 1980s, and I have a feeling that it'll be the most popular in the series thus far for just that reason. Adam Hughes' art is as polished as ever. It's a shame he can't work a monthly title into his schedule, because he's not only a good illustrator, but a good storyteller, as well. Grade: A.

Mateer: Remember the movie Father's Day, from last month — the one with Billy Crystal and Robin Williams? Good writers, good director, good actors — on paper, it looked like it would be great. Unfortunately, on film it was only mediocre. That's how I feel about this comic book: You've got James Robinson writing it and Hughes drawing it. You've got Cyclops, Phoenix, Wolverine, Nightcrawler, Voodoo, Warblade, Spartan, Daemonites, The Hellfire Club — perfect, right? Except that, on actual paper, it's just — average. The sum is less than the parts. Oh, there are good bits here and there, and it's OK, but somehow with all that creative potential it should have been more than "OK." For example: In the beginning, Nightcrawler and Warblade cross paths. Warblade thinks Nightcrawler is a Daemonite and attacks, and Nightcrawler catches a glimpse of claws and says "Wolverine?" and then they fight. Geez, guys, I could have written that — but I'd rather read a comic book that's better than one I could think up (which, Lord knows, shouldn't be too hard). Grade: B-.

Retailers' grade: B+

Shi: The Series #1

Crusade, 32 pages, color, $2.95

Crusade's Jeff Zapata: "This exciting new series is presented by writer Tony Bedard and artist J.G. Jones, the same team that produced Tomoe: The Unforgettable Fire." The storyline picks up from Unforgettable Fire, as Tomoe asks Ana Ishikawa's help against a demonic foe.

Mateer: Out of all the "Good Girl" and "Bad Girl" comics that have swamped the market in the last few years, Shi has been one of the best — and one of the few that has a chance of staying around after the flood waters recede. Shi: The Series is (duh) the character's new ongoing title. Readers new to the character will be confused at first, since there's so much backstory on the setting and supporting cast to absorb, but J.G. Jones' art should help quite a bit — it's easy to follow and easy on the eyes, with a knack for shading and composition that reminds me of Gene Colan. (The preview had black-and-white pencils only; I'm hoping the coloring in the final version won't screw it up.) Unlike many artists, Jones doesn't grossly exaggerate the female figure's, um, attributes unrealistically, with one strange exception: In close-ups, the characters have disproportionately long necks — they look like giraffes. That's a small nitpick, though — this is worth a look, for fans of adventure, martial arts, and, yes, "Good Girl" art. Grade: B.

Ginsberg: Gee, I thought there already was a regular Shi series! Anyway, like her 11th-century namesake, the contemporary Tomoe embodies the courage and honor that defines the life of a samurai.

All her skills and bravery will be called upon to save her own sanity, as well as her entire homeland. The tension of this conflict is reflected in the highly detailed art and a story that is filled with action and intrigue.

It will be interesting to see how well this title, admirably rendered by writer Tony Bedard and artist J.G. Jones, is received without the intimate involvement of creator Bill Tucci. I give it a B for Bushido.

Biggers: Judging from its beginnings in Tomoe: The Unforgettable Fire, Shi: The Series will offer a solid story and appealing art. My problem is one of personal taste. I've read so many martial arts "Bad Girl" stories that I'm becoming a bit jaded, so none of them stand out in my mind. This is an entertaining series for those who enjoy the sub-genre and a pretty comic book to look at, regardless of your tastes. Grade: B+.

If you're a comics-collecting veteran, you probably have year after year of Overstreet Price Guides on your reference shelves.

Cliff Biggers

If you pull 'em down and track some titles over a 10 to 15 year period, you notice that, inevitably, the trend has always been upwards; prices on back-issue comics have continued to rise, sometimes insignificantly, sometimes tremendously.

That's the way this hobby worked for a long, long time; you knew that a comic book would increase in price, because that's the way things work with collectibles, right?

Not right.

In recent years, comic books have ridden the collectible roller coaster, climbing up steep price curves only to plummet soon after.

There are different reasons for this, but the result is still the same: This is a field in which the collector can no longer be sure that prices will rise steadily year after year, and it has become a much more chancy field for speculation than it was in the past.

"This is a field in which the collector can no longer be sure that prices will rise steadily year after year."

In the 1970s and early 1980s, many retailers were willing to pay a flat percentage of guide price for older comics, simply becuase they knew they'd get a reasonable return on their investment sooner or later. Nowadays, though, most retailers cherry-pick the back issues they're willing to invest in, because the field no longer trends upwards as it did.

Shazam. Howard the Duck. Miracleman. Thor. Ronin. American Flagg. Judge Dredd. Magnus. Turok. Love & Rockets. Vampire Lestat.

These are just a few titles that have soared in price, only to fall off significantly later on. At one time, all these comics were speculators' dream books; you could invest cash in 'em today knowing that, within a week or two, you'd get more than you paid for them as more and more collectors clamored to find the hot comic book of the month.

But prices didn't keep going up. Instead, they plateaued after a few months — and after a while, prices began to drop. In some cases, they dropped precipitously, with some of these comics falling to cover-price levels after soaring into the recent-back-issue stratosphere. In other cases, they dropped slowly and steadily over a long period of time. But the one thing that these comics have in common is that many issues of these titles can now be had for 10% to 20% of their all-time high guide value — and even less, if you do some careful bargain shopping.

This is why "civilian" speculators find comic books to be a frustrating collectible field. These aren't people who buy comics to read them; they buy comics to make money from them.

When they could assume that age equalled value, it became easy for them to play the game: they'd buy comics, sit on them for a while, then sell them for a profit.

Truth is, it was never that easy. But now such a philosophy is downright foolish. Many back-issue comics are worth about as much as last September's local newspaper, unless you can find that customer who's looking for them. We assign a minimal value of cover price in the CBG Price Guide, but the honest truth is there are retailers all over the country who'd gladly sell you 5 and 10-year-old comics for 3¢ to 10¢ apiece, if you'd let them pick the comics.

I — and pretty much everyone else in the pages of CBG — have always warned against viewing comics as a get-rich-quick field. But it's more true now than ever before. Sure, there are comics going up in price — but there are comics dropping in price as well, and some of them are comics that were on someone's hot list just a few months or a few years ago.

And there are some Cassandras in the collectibles field who have warned that the prices could even fall on non-key Silver Age comics as collectors began to balk at $30 to $50 prices for these comics. And no one's chastising them for such predictions, because it could happen.

One convention retailer reports that the demand for Silver Age comics from 1964 to 1970 has fallen off; comics that used to sell within a month or two he now has in duplicate or triplicate, and they aren't moving.

He hasn't lowered his prices so far, because these are the "gold chip stocks" of the comic-book field — but he admits that, if he doesn't see some action on these titles this summer, it may be time to start dropping prices on those comics, too.

The next time you're going through the guide, pay attention to the price "traffic flow" — it's definitely a two-way street out there!

OUR INDEPENDENTS PRICE LISTING T-Z FOLLOWS IN THIS SECTION.

State of the Market

Think videogames don't have much of an effect on comic books? Try to find copies of Scud in most stores across the country. Since the game came out, demand for this comic book has skyrocketed among people who, a year ago, had never heard of Scud. Early issues are climbing in price; and even recent issues and trade paperbacks continue to sell out.

Alan Moore's Supreme, Warren Ellis and Tom Raney's Stormwatch, and Terry Moore's Strangers in Paradise continue to attract new readers largely by word of mouth. Quality makes a difference, and all three of these titles deliver the goods in that regard. The first couple of Stormwatch issues by Ellis are proving particularly hard to find considering how relatively recent they are; early Antarctic and Abstract issues of Strangers in Paradise are soaring in price as they become more and more difficult to locate. Demand for The Darkness has leveled off, as readers are unsure what to expect from the series after issue six, when a new creative writer takes over. The reading public's growing disaffection with "Bad Girl" comics is taking its toll, as numbers for almost all of the "Bad Girl" titles — even the biggest high-profile comics from major publishers — dip. Look for this to translate to stagnant or falling prices on some of the once-hot "Bad Girl" titles as more and more publishers continue to offer "Bad Girl" comics, overloading an audience that isn't growing the way it once was.

Unknown Soldier has been a surprise hit for DC's Vertigo line; the first issue is proving hard to find for some collectors, since most stores underordered this book. Should Vertigo follow it up with a second Unknown Soldier series, look for prices to climb further.

Marvel's Flashback Month seems to have generated strong interest among many readers who had cut back on their Marvel reading, but it's too early to tell if that's going to translate into increased back-issue demand. If Marvel can follow this with crisp, well-told stories that deliver some sort of resolution on a monthly basis, it's likely that these readers will come back to some of their old favorites. If so, it's also likely that they'll decide to delve into the back-issue market to fill in gaps in their collection.

The Winners of last month's contest:

Lewis Hall, Wash. — Crutch Spawn action figure

Art Ossman, Ill. — Devil's Reign chapters 1-3: Weapon Zero/Silver Surfer, Cyblade/Ghost Rider, and Ghost Rider/Ballistic

Kevin Clark, N.H. — Avengers: Timeslide

Frank Lloyd Jr., W.V. — Mutant Chronicles trade paperback

Michael Skidmire, Ill. — Action Planet Comics #3

Thanks to all who entered the contest in the Price Guide supplement to CBG #1229 and thanks, too, to Image Comics, Marvel Comics, DC Comics, Acclaim Comics, and Action Planet for providing some of the prizes.

This* issue's contest features the following prizes: Batman and Robin movie X-L T-shirt; Batman: Birth of the Demon trade paperback,; Batman/Spawn: War Devil graphic novel; Batman versus Predator II trade paperback; and The Witchblade Collected Editions Vol. 1.

To enter, send your name, address, and age to Michael Dean, CBG Price Guide Contest, 700 E. State St., Iola, WI 54990. (Only one entry per person, please.) Hurry, the deadline is Monday, July 7, 1997. Winners will be announced in the next CBG Price Guide Supplement, which will be in CBG #1237.

The prices given here are for near-mint comics. This is the most acceptable and general condition a collector desires for newer comics. A near-mint copy is almost perfect — with almost no signs of wear or aging. There might be one or two tiny defects discernable only on close examination (for example, an extremely slight flaking on the spine).

The condition of comics is a vital factor in determining comics values. The primary conditions used in grading are "poor" (undesirable in most collections), "fair," "good," "fine," and "mint." Other grades, including the "near-mint" we use, are steps between these. A "fair" issue would be worth about 20% of our price. A "fine" issue would be worth about 60% of our price. And a "mint" copy would be worth 120% of our price.

Note: Changes that occurred between our last CBG Price Guide and this one are indicated by a + or - sign. Prices that went up from our last issue have the + sign by the title. Prices that went down from our last issue have the - sign by the title.

Why are there shaded areas in the price guide?

We shade certain titles to call attention to price changes, character appearances, and other interesting facts, with many of these trivia tidbits indicated by the heading Didja know?

For example, didja know that several decades after Tarzan visited Pellucidar in the novel Tarzan at the Earth's Core, he returned to the center of the Earth in the four-issue Dark Horse mini-series Tarzan vs. Predator At the Earth's Core and finally visited Mars in Dark Horse's Tarzan / John Carter: Warlords of Mars?

This section features listings for retail comics stores around the world. Traveling comics collectors of all types search for new stores to dig through on their vacations, business trips, etc. Advertise your establishment here, including approximately ten words of miscellaneous description, for only $3.50 an issue. You can buy this space in increments of 26 or 52 issues, for $91.00 or $182.00 respectively. Send in your store name, address, phone number, and approximately ten words of description, along with your payment. If you stock Comics Buyer's Guide we'll put your listing in boldface type.

☐ 1 year $182.00 (52 issues) ☐ 6 months $91.00 (26 issues)

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

THE "NOT-AN-AUCTION" SALE!

UNFORTUNATELY, I DON'T HAVE THE TIME TO RUN AN AUCTION. LATELY YOU DON'T SEE MANY FUN ONES WHERE YOU MAY GET A GOOD OR UNUSUAL ITEM AT A GOOD PRICE. (IN MOST RECENT AUCTIONS THE MINIMUM BIDS ALONE GUARANTEE THAT YOU WON'T BE GETTING ANY BARGAINS). IN THIS AD I OFFER SOME PRETTY GOOD ITEMS YOU DON'T SEE OFTEN AT REAL BARGAIN PRICES---- CHECK THESE PRICES OUT! YOUR MONEY BACK ON ANY ITEM IF NOT SATISFIED --- JUST RETURN WITHIN 7 DAYS OF RECEIPT. PLEASE INCLUDE $5 FOR POSTAGE AND INSURANCE (UNLESS YOU PAY WITH A POSTAL MONEY ORDER--- THEN I COVER THESE CHARGES TO MAKE UP FOR YOUR TROUBLE. I KNOW WHAT THOSE POST OFFICES ARE LIKE).

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Ever dream about finding a collector selling his books at a great price, and getting first crack at them? See, dreams do come true!

"Century of Comics" nn

The third comic book!. Missed Sotheby's deadline. Estimated up to 20 total copies exist, none in NM-Mint. Bought by Wheatena,, Milk-O-Malt , Kinney Shoe Stores, etc as premiums and giveaways. Century of Comics is the most valuable of the "Premium Comic Books. This copy is TOTALLY UNRESTORED and never offered for sale until its' discovery last year. It has been professionally graded by CGSA with a certified condition of Very Good+ with beige pages . It has the appearance of a Fine-VF book but some rust on the staples has caused cover to detach. This is below guide for this rare comic book in a day when that word is overused. $6750.00

Tales of Suspense # 38

Origin and first appearance of the IRON MAN. March 1963. It has been professionally graded and certified by CGSA as Very Good . Unrestored. Slight crease on cover towards lower corner, hard to see. Book lays flat. Name and date written on interior first page at top. Cover has "117" written just below title about 1/2" to 3/4" tall. Interior pages are light tan. Nice, attractive book well below guide. $575.00

Buyer pays $12 postage and insurance per book. Call to reserve or for more details. All offers on these items considered.

Trader Tips

The Trader ads in CBG are an easy and economical way to advertise. Simply design your ad in a space that is 8½" wide by 8½" high and send it along with payment ($40.00 per Trader space) and complete reference form to:

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE
Advertising Department
700 E. State Street
Iola, WI 54990-0001

We'll reduce your ad to the proper size and place it in the issue(s) you request. If no specific issue(s) is requested, we'll run your ad in the next available issue.

Keep in mind that CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or symbols to Trader ads. The better your ad looks when you send it to us, the better it will look when it is reduced and published in CBG.

But I Digress

tal rallying cry of, "Get away from her, you bitch!"

In short, script wise, Lost World comes up short in comparison to its immediate predecessor, to other films that had explored the same themes, and even to other works of its director (Spielberg got more emotional punch and tension out of 10 minutes of Jaws and its rubber shark than he did out of the entire two hours, 10 minutes of Lost World and its incredible computer-generated dinosaurs.)

And yet Lost World winds up fitting the general audience definition and showbiz definition of a great film: For the former, it's eye candy, and for the latter, it's making piles of money.

The bottom line is that — as much as I hate to admit it — you don't need a great script to make a great movie. You don't even need a good script. Comic books are similar in that respect: Great artwork can overwhelm a lousy story, and bad artwork can destroy a great story. (Although when a movie turns out great, the director is credited; when a movie turns out lousy, the writer is blamed.)

I'll never forget when Tom DeFalco dissected the script of Raiders of the Lost Ark. Here's a movie wherein the hero had some sort of illicit affair with a presumably under-aged young girl. He's engaged in shady endeavors involving priceless artifacts. Every time he gets his hands on something, he inevitably loses it to his competitors. At the climax of the film, he attempts a bluff, gets called on it, has no back-up plan, is tied to a stake, and God has to save him. And yet Raiders is a fabulous film.

It's undeniable. I own it on laserdisc; I could watch it again and again.

Films such as Lost World do their job simply by attracting and holding the eye.

To some extent, it doesn't matter that they don't engage the viewer emotionally. The movie makers know they don't have to, and so they don't bother. Which is a crying shame, because it means that the current cycle of brainless Hollywood eye candy will continue, with more cartoon characters, more shallow-to-nonexistent characterization, and more idiot plots.

Did I mention how great the dinosaurs looked?

Peter David, writer of stuff, can be written to at To Be Continued, Inc., P.O. Box 239, Bayport, NY 11705. Saw the trailer for the Spawn movie. Looks great.

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Discover.

C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.

D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.

E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.

F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from long-hand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Du to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.

M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.

N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility of any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. [Spoiler Warning: As Peter says in his introduction to this week's column, The Lost World: Jurassic Park is a "yet" film. If you haven't seen it yet, you may want to hold off on reading this column until you do. Oh, yes, he also mentions events from Aliens further into the column. Consider yourself warned.]

Dan T's Inferno

By Dan Tyree

In CBG #1170 Maggie rejoiced over signs of new enthusiasm in the comics industry and fandom. Here are some glaring omissions from her list:

• Statistics show more and more females entering comics shops — as police officers conducting raids.

• QVC once more accepts phone calls from comics publishers. ("If you have only two million copies of your rare collectible to unload, press 1.")

• Fed-up readers demand "good comics" — to go with the "good politicians" they demanded in '92, '94, and '96.

• Nearly 80% of "Done in One" stories manage to finish before being canceled.

• Slovenly clerks now can afford to upchuck real food when offering unsolicited comments on customers' non-superhero purchases.

• DC goes ahead with the long-delayed Sugar and Spike: Trimester One.

• Sales records set by the album We Are the World are eclipsed by the idealistic new ditty "We Are the Self-Publishers Who Wish We Could Remain Completely Independent, But ..."

• Rejuvenated heroes Tony Stark and Ray Palmer no longer have to split their paper-route money with their editors.

Dan Tyree welcomes [illegible] at 1801 Snake Creek [illegible] Belfast, TN 37019.

Last year's "yet" film was Independence Day. A "yet" film, for those who missed the column or else simply have more important things on their mind (like, well, anything, I guess) is one wherein you don't simply ask friends, "Have you seen (fill in the blank)?" Instead you ask, "Have you seen (fill in the blank) yet?" because it's simply a given. It crosses genre lines and interest lines, cutting a swath across the American movie-going consciousness.

This year's "yet" film is, of course, the movie that you've already seen: The Lost World: Jurassic Park, in which the dinosaurs look great.

This is not to be confused with the Arthur Conan Doyle story of the same name, a book I read years ago and which I remember primarily for Doyle's marvelous hero, Professor Challenger: A hard-bitten scientist who seemed like a cross between Sherlock Holmes and Monk Mayfair.

The good news is, the sequel makes the threadbare, cardboard-character story of the first film seem like it was crafted by Tennessee Williams.

And the dinosaurs look great.

The bad news is what I figure you've pretty much already glommed to. When it comes to the story, as was once said about Hollywood: There's no "there" there. And what is there was already done better elsewhere.

Lost World is also a bizarre agglomeration of book and film requirements. The opening sequence, for example, is taken not from the Michael Crichton book of the same name, but rather from the beginning of the original book. And the climax of the film, in which an enraged T. rex stomps through San Diego (but does not, unfortunately, make it over to the Comic-Con, which is a crying shame) was taken not from the book but from King Kong — and even, if my admittedly spotty memory is serving me, from the original silent-movie version of the Doyle book.

But the dinosaurs look great.

Even Jeff Goldblum's character, chaos theorist Ian Malcolm, owes his existence to movie requirements, considering the fact that he (and for that matter, John Hammond) were obliterated in the first book. (Actually, it's assumed that everyone has seen the original movie, because Malcolm's theories and specialty play no factor and aren't even, I think, mentioned.)

But Goldblum's patented quirky delivery, mildly distracted air, and imposing physical presence (he must be, what? 9 feet tall?) were easily the best character elements of the original film, so not only was he spared in the first script, but he was chosen to headline the sequel. There hasn't been such a miraculous literature-based film-dictated resurrection since John Rambo showed up in the book version of First Blood, Part II, which was a good trick considering that he was killed at the end of the original novel.

It doesn't help that the film suffers from what's called an "idiot plot," namely that for the story to (nominally) work, everyone in it has to be an idiot. The sequence that leaped out at me in particular was when the following elements had been firmly established:

1. The carnivores have moved out of their immediate stomping grounds and are in pursuit of our heroes.

2. The dinos are very possessive about their young.

3. Mrs. and Mrs. T. rex are cheesed off that our heroes were mucking with their baby.

4. The dinos have a fairly sharp sense of smell. So what ensemble is Sarah the paleontologist wearing? A vest soaked in the blood of the baby T. rex, which isn't drying in the heat. Just what the well-dressed would-be survivor should be wearing: A Tyrannosaur magnet.

But let's not lose sight of the fact that the dinosaurs looked great.

The problem with Lost World is that it's uninvolving on an emotional basis, i.e., caring about what happens to the characters. There is once again an attempt to have some sort of perfunctory character arc. In the first film, it was Sam Neill's character being uncomfortable with children; by film's end, the kids were leaning on his shoulders and we knew that he was past this flaw. The problem is: Big deal. His kid-phobia wasn't awesomely relevant to the plot; it's not as if he kept trying to ditch the youngsters or considered for a moment throwing one of them to a hungry 'raptor as a distraction.

This time around, we have an even more half-hearted attempt at character growth involving Malcolm and his (heretofore unmentioned) daughter. He's busy, and she feels neglected. Ironically there is the germ of an interesting notion here, if one contrasts it thematically (as we're supposed to, I guess) with mom and dad T. rex and their dedication to their child. It's almost as if the film is saying that the dinos are more dedicated to their offspring than are humans. Nice thought. But the Malcolm/daughter plot doesn't really go anywhere, since Malcolm doesn't come away from the experience having learned all that much as a father, except maybe that he should check his RV next time to make sure there's no stowaways. For that matter, his daughter disappears altogether in the last 20 minutes (as opposed to, say, Tommy Lee Jones saving his daughter in the climax of Volcano, which was hardly Citizen Kane but at least had some sort of payoff to the nominal character arc.)

But the dinosaurs look great.

Is it possible to do an adventure/suspense film with genuine character development, arcs that make sense, and edge-of-your-seat sensibility? Sure. Contrast Lost World with, for example, Aliens, a film that got everything right.

• Both Malcolm and Sigourney Weaver's Ripley are pretty much in the same fix: They must return to a horrific situation against their will. In Malcolm's case, he goes for the most simple reason possible: His girlfriend, Sarah, is already on the island and he's decided he must spearhead a "rescue mission." No muss, no fuss, no imagination.

As opposed to the deeply troubled Ripley. Nominally she's also returning in a rescue capacity, but it's established early on that a threat to the colonists is really insufficient to spur her into action.

They're dead or they're not dead: It's no never mind to her either way. She makes it clear that under no circumstance is she going to stick her neck out for them. Nothing is more important to her than her own survival. But she is driven to return by her own nightmares, which won't let her rest, and her need to see first hand that the aliens are exterminated down to the last one.

• Both Malcolm and Ripley try to convince their cohorts about the danger they're going to face.

Ripley's attempts are dramatic, heart-felt, and riddled with impending doom. She's a space-age Cassandra: She knows what's going to happen to the marines, she tries to warn them and yet, tragically, she knows she's doomed to failure.

Malcolm's admonitions, by contrast, are lightweight. Either they're straight-up laugh lines ("I'll be back in five or six days." "No, you'll be back in five or six pieces.") or they're flip deconstructions of the film, as if Malcolm is expressing outright disdain for the clichés of the genre ("Oh sure, ooooh, ahhhh, but later comes the running and the screaming.")

• Both films feature parenting as a theme. But in Lost World, the arc with Malcolm father and daughter is underdeveloped, unrealized, and, in regards to the climax, irrelevant, while the T. rex stomping around San Diego searching for its offspring was just another reason for the monster to cause damage (like it needed any?) and came across as a pale imitation of Kong searching for Fay Wray.

In Aliens, however, Ripley's relationship with Newt is instrumental in her character's development.

She willingly risks her life to save the child when she could have gotten away easily. As opposed to her character in the film's first half, she's discovered that simply surviving with one's own skin intact isn't always enough. And her face-offs with the Alien queen are masterful in terms of carrying the theme through: The first time in the egg hatchery, you have one protective mother versus another. And the second time, aboard the Sulaco, the queen wants to exact vengeance for the loss of her children, and Ripley stands ready to go head-to-head in order to defend her child. Ripley's entrance wearing the power loader "armor" is one of the most rousing in science-fiction film history precisely because there's such heavy emotional investment: Ripley has come so far as a character that she is not only willing to face her fear head on, she's ready to kick its butt with her immor-
